Letters

Letters to the editor are welcome. While there is no limit on the number of words, please write only enough material to adequately cover the subject. Anonymous letters are not acceptable, although names may be withheld on request.

Dear Editor:

Enclosed are a few articles I thought might be interesting to you in the light of past discussions on over-population and over-building in this area.

Mr. Smiley is Garden Editor of our Miami Herald and writes many articles about rural Florida and current changes in this State.

The Miami Beach Council is a well-known farce of so called government and somestimes portions of the sessions are broadcast over local radio with accompanying sounds of yelling - screaming and so forth. Enough to turn a tender stomach.

Earlier this year Miami Beach water was found unsafe and residents were asked to boil all water. Now we have so much chlorddane in our water we are force to buy bottled water for drinking and cooking. Have you heard of our local 'Rose Bowl' out in the Atlantic where raw sewage from the many hotels is pumped? Some of it floats back to shore at times.

Enough about this blighted place. We are again looking forward to another vacation in Carmel - this time in June to celebrate our 25th Anniversary. Unfortunately we will only have a week there as we are to spend three weeks in England again this coming September, however it will be wonderful to see your lovely beach and trees and to enjoy the quiet and serenity that means Carmel to us.

Sincerely,
MRS. CHARLES A. BAKER

Dear Editor:

It seems to me an inexpensive and much-needed solution to the post office parking problem could be achieved by painting the curb red from 5th to the Dolores Street entrance to the lot, and opening up the driveway to allow easy access from the new lane thus formed (right-turn).

Also, it would help if Dolores Street from 4th to 5th were made one-way, southbound, though this may not be necessary.

Dear Editor:

Man cannot indefinitely survive the despoilation of his earth abode. Population increase and the waste and misuse of resources will bring their penalty. It is fair to assume that when pollution gets more lethal, action will be taken. London, after thousands died from air pollution in 1952, cleaned itself. Russia has built hundreds of new cities for the development of man. In the U.S., death from air pollution has taken mostly the very old and the young.

Experts tell us of the danger. Few, if any, advance any practical plan. Population increase is a world problem and world-wide sterilization of parents with two or more children could be helped by a bonus of $1,000 and free hospital care. Taxing all land at its use value will provide ample means and relieve taxpayers from all other taxes for revenue, and, as a bonus, afford opportunity for the growth of the human spirit.

To the Editor:

In the spring of 1971, our then Mayor Laiolo officially presented the citizens of Carmel with a "fait accompli." The city had accepted as a gift a portion of the Doolittle property, and purchased the remainder. A later acquisition of the Flanders estate adjacent to, and overlooking this beautiful wild canyon was an added beneficence.

I do not think that we citizens have been truly aware of what we have been given, nor, as a result, have we expressed our gratitude to the donors, and to our city fathers for acting in our behalf. Perhaps we have thought of this gift as only an open space meadow across from the Mission, not realizing its true extent. Many, like myself, will not have thought to explore it -- so do let me invite you to come and see what could be our future recreation park.

Walking south of 10th street, and on the left hand side of Junipero one takes the first little left lane, which at present is unnamed, unmarked, and unmapped. It could be named Doolittle Lane, and how delightful to have a "Do-little Park." Winding past a few houses, and the back of Lady Kinnoull's well-kept gardens, it enters at once into a lovely woodland canyon covered with native plants, wild flowers, many species of trees, winding trails, and lovely hillside vistas of the Mission and its surroundings.

Here it is, a quiet secluded wild area, which with a minimum of attention and development could be turned into a perfect recreation area. A park right in the heart of our town, where all our walkers, young and old could safely go for an evening stroll, or a short hike, where children could picnic and play without disturbing anyone, and where there is absolutely no traffic. It should be kept a walk-in park, keeping its lovely winding lane as its entrance.

I have not asked, nor have I heard, but I do hope that our Planning Commission has already envisioned its possibilities, and will soon be launching us into a program to develop this lovely place. They could enlist the whole community and unite it at last in one grand effort.

Meanwhile, do get out your walking shoes, go prepared against poison oak, and take your first walk into this canyon. It is a great experience, and will surely make you, as it has me, an enthusiast for its immediate development.

Dear Editor:

Standard International, the developer of Hidden Hills, applied through California-American Water for an extension of service to their area. The Public Utilities Commission held a hearing in Monterey on the matter.

After a thorough study the P.U.C. staff recommended in their report that the application be denied, stating that the present water supply was hardly adequate for the present service area.

It would have been amusing, if not so serious, to hear the engineers from the water company and developer refute the staff report and state there was an adequate supply.

One only has to look about the present service area and see the new and proposed dwellings, commercial enterprises, high density developments, apartments, etc., to realize that more and more water is to be needed and if we have any surplus it will be soon used.

Should the present customers have to endure rationing or higher water bills to provide water for more developments?

The president of Standard-International stated that in his home city in Massachusetts they sometimes have to curtail water use for a short time, but, there, summer rains are common, here, from early April to late October we get none or little rain - we would have long term rationing.

All the engineering reports relied heavily on pumping from wells in Carmel Valley. We are placing more roofs and more paving as we build in this area, water that might recharge the wells will more and more rush to the river and out to sea. Can we rely on this pumped water supply?

In conclusion let us hope that the commissioners of the P.U.C. will adopt the recommendations of their staff, deny any extension of Cal-Am service area and thus not impose rationing, or high water bills on properties, that for year and years have paid for and provided enough water for the present users. Any new supply should be paid for by those who are now outside the present service area.

Dear Editor:

Is there a person in Carmel who has not heard of Watergate? If there is he must be a 24-hour-a-day golf enthusiast who hasn't a moment to spare to read the press or watch T.V. Surely the word Watergate will make the next edition of the dictionary. The word is with us all the time. It is on most people's lips throughout the land. It gets around abroad. Yet, but few know its full significance.

Does it only signify political treachery? Using foul means to defeat political opponents? An isolated case of corruption?

Or, is it a current example of something vile permeating society? Older folks can recall Tea Pot Dome scandals, and periodic rascality in high places ever since. What of much of our communication media peddling vulgarity, greed, cynicism, horror, every demoralizing influence? What standard does it uphold?

What of government of a mighty nation leaping in to get involved in strife of small nations? Waging massive and terrifying warfare on lands that cannot possibly be a threat to our shores? Disregarding public opinion, and the conscience of the world? Taking sides with one set of tyrants against another, and pretending the side we support is led by native Lincolns and Jeffersons? Led by "lovers of democracy" -- though such rulers torture and jail and murder political opponents, use our money to fatten Swiss bank accounts held secretly?

What of permissiveness toward debauchery, every vice? Towards booze, drugs, tobacco, cheap night life entertainment, mockery of ethics, sneering at everything worthwhile? What of ignoring or merely slapping on the wrist, crime? Crime that robs, rapes, cripples, and kills on a fearful scale?

What of the deception and greed in much of business, profession, organization, political campaign, in so much of society from top to bottom? What of the imbecility of brutish grooming, suggestive clothing, deliberate effort to look like a bum or a sex symbol collecting stares? Utter lack of human dignity?

What of a society squandering much of its wealth on idiocy -- avoidable wars, going to the moon, on far-fetched schemes -- while many millions live deprived, miserable unhappy lives? Ill-housed, ill-fed, ill-clothed, ill-educated? And inflation climbs and climbs, taxes go up and up and up, shortages accumulate, ugly slums and blotches grow, pollution mounts to the serious danger point, and freedom of the press is threatened? Problems grow unsolvable?

What of the demoralization of many youth? Their addiction to drugs and vice, their hopelessness caused by political corruption, cynicism in society, and mixed-up values taught them? What of the gluttony being promoted and the harmful foods and drinks available; the implied philosophy to "eat, drink and be merry -- for tomorrow you may die?"

What of the poor example of those in positions of authority? Watergate is an alarm: America, the world, learn from the mistakes of past civilizations! Let morality be your guide daily, or go to pieces - debauched, corrupt, cynical, lacking faith in one another! Watergate may be a late piece of evidence that man in many instances is yet in a very primitive stage of civilization. Yet an excessively selfish animal, even though he can jabber. Yet a sneak, suspicious, nasty, fearful -- though he is learned in the law, holds a degree, likes to be addressed -- when in political office quite high -- as "Honorable So-and-So."

Sincerely yours
GEORGE HERMAN

An inside look at the Watergate affair

By ROBERT MISKIMON

THE WIDENING RIPPLES of the Watergate case should give pause to politicians of all parties, says Winthrop Griffith of Carmel Valley, who became press secretary to the Democratic National Committee just after the now infamous "bugging."

Griffith, who is now administrative assistant to State Superintendent of Public Instruction Wilson Riles, worked at the complex of buildings in Washington, D.C. known as Watergate in August-December of 1972.

Although the major "bugging" incident was in June, "a couple of weeks after I started, a bug was found in the room next to mine," Griffith related.

"I didn't worry about it personally, but a lot of people at the Democratic National Convention went on the amused assumption that everybody was bugged," he said.

Griffith, who has been directly involved in politics for the last 12 years, and is the author of "Humphrey: A Candid Biography," published in 1965, believes the Watergate case is "the worst scandal in the White House."

The apparent evidence indicating that the Watergate break-in and electronic surveillance of Democratic campaign headquarters was known to persons at the highest level in the Committee for the Re-election of the President is demeaning to the entire political process, Griffith said.

"Here was a blatant abuse of the democratic process," he said. "I hate to see anything like this happen in either party, because it undermines the public's faith in the political process."

Griffith said he believes there is considerable evidence that the Republican party "had an overall strategy of espionage and sabotage" against the entire Democratic party effort in the presidential election.

"The GOP was behind the so-called foul-up in the Muskie campaign. I can't see how Nixon could easily get out of this one. The question is to what extent Nixon knew. To me, he is clearly and totally responsible," he said.

Griffith said there was a "full sweep" of democratic offices by the FBI following the arrest by Washington, D.C. police of the initial six break-in suspects.

"The men captured were in Larry O'Brien's office (former Democratic National Committee Chairman Lawrence O'Brien) and it was unlikely they would have bugged my office, since most of the information I had was public anyway," Griffith said.

His job as press secretary was to work for the entire Democratic party effort in the 1972 election, and to do press relations for the Democratic National Committee.

BECAUSE OF initial public indifference to the Watergate case, "a lot of politicians assumed that the public was skeptical," he said. "It's clear now that the incident itself, and all confirmation of it, has aroused substantial outrage in the country.

"I hope it will backfire to the extent that politicians of both parties will conduct future campaigns in the fair manner we're accustomed to in our system."

Although "out-of-line and shady stuff has existed in both parties throughout American history," Griffith said, he admits to being "surprised at the lack of cynical, seedy, dishonest politicians and practices" he had been led to expect from literary studies of politics.

"The whole question of why the Watergate thing didn't become an issue back at the time of the election puzzles me," he said. "People in Washington were aware of it, but the people in the field don't seem to know of it."

He ascribes the fact Watergate didn't become a real issue in the election to two factors:

-- "A tremendous skepticism on the part of the public during any campaign that any major development involving conflict between the two parties has any merit.

-- "The press didn't pick it up. Watergate got the most modest, bare and infrequent coverage as the story unfolded."

After the arrest of the Watergate break-in suspects, "it was immediately known that at least one was on the Committee for the Re-election of the President," Griffith recalled.

Another reason why Watergate didn't become a burning issue in the McGovern-Nixon presidential contest was that "the Democrats confused the issue," which drew attention from the bare facts of "the blunt, criminal act" at Watergate, he said.

The fact the Democratic National Committee filed two lawsuits, and the Republicans countered with lawsuits of their own, also helped to confuse the real issue in the mind of the voter, Griffith explained.

"The blunt fact of these people being captured was overlooked," he said. "And a lot of people in the country didn't want to believe it. Nixon had been to China, and there were Vietnam troop withdrawals. The strong position of Nixon made it harder for people to believe it."

One result of the Watergate case may be a diminishing of the power of the executive branch of the federal government, he said.

"I've had the feeling in recent years, there's been a growing indifference by people toward the presidency. There's still a lot of activism around, but it tends to be more directed at local races, partly as a result of the grim period of the last eight years.

"People aren't as hopeful about the presidency in directing their lives. So, when Watergate came and seemed to incriminate the President, there wasn't that much interest."

The fact people are becoming painfully aware of the whole incident can be traced in the progression of rhetoric, Griffith said.

"It was first called the Watergate 'caper,' then the Watergate 'affair,' and now the Watergate 'scandal'," he mused.

Even if Watergate had been an issue in the last election, he said, it alone would not have been sufficient for McGovern's victory. The effect of the incident "will have a big effect in the Congressional elections, and I can see the Democratic party rank increasing by substantial margins," he predicted.

"The most appalling thing about this was Nixon's emphasis on law and order in 1968. Now, a former attorney general and others high in the administration are involved in it. I just wonder what this will mean for young people and their respect for the law."

Carmel reader asks:

Why not have a circular traffic flow?

A CARMEL RESIDENT has provided the Pine Cone with a suggestion for relieving some traffic congestion.

The proposal is based on two premises: that shops in Carmel are entered by people on foot; and that there is no business on Ocean Avenue serving automobiles as machines.

Here's his plan:

Allow traffic into the downtown area on an unrestricted basis weekday mornings, but require all deliveries in the commercial district be made before 12 p.m.

Restrict or prohibit some traffic in a small designated area in the afternoons and Saturdays and Sundays. Establish four streets as one-way, and use existing parking lots to a greater extent.

Establish at once, one-way traffic at all times on Junipero Avenue in a northerly direction, on 6th Avenue going west, on Monte Verde Street going south, and 7th Avenue going east.

The effect of this, theoretically, would be to make a circle around a small area on Ocean Avenue. The circle could then be exited and entered away from Ocean Avenue.

At selected times, such as afternoons and week days, and all Saturdays and Sundays, entrances to Ocean Avenue at Junipero and Monte Verde should be barricaded, as well as entrances to Ocean from Mission, San Carlos, Dolores and Lincoln at 6th and 7th avenues.

Exceptions to the proposal would be needed, the reader says, for the Pine Inn and one bank, and for filling stations on 7th Avenue. The plan envisions those cars remaining within the area from morning parking as being allowed to leave. Fire, police and rescue vehicles would be allowed to enter.

The reader further suggests:

"MAKE ACTIVE, controlled use of all private parking lots when not required by the owners. The parking lots for the bank, the savings and loan, and the churches should be utilized by the visitors whenever the establishments are not open to the public.

"A charge can be made for this. A person can regulate entrances and collect a small fee from cars leaving, or, there are various parking lot mechanisms that can be used to collect a fee.

"High school students, college students, women, old-timers can all do this part-time. In the high school area, all parking lots should be fully open to visitors whenever not being used by students, faculty or other employes.

"Perhaps a bus can shuttle back and forth for a fee, a small charge (collected) for each person each way, or a charge coming from the parking lot with a return ticket furnished."

The Pine Cone reader also suggests that a second school bus be used when not otherwise in use, and "an attempt should be made to find a place and erect a parking garage of at least three floors, one underground and two above."

"This plan lends itself to variations, and doesn't cost much money. I offer it to promote discussion," he says.

Anybody out there?

Citizens ask more emphasis on reading and writing

REQUIRED INSTRUCTION in reading and composition in all English courses at Carmel High School is recommended in a curriculum review report prepared by a citizens' committee.

The report was presented to the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees at their regular meeting last Wednesday.

After a review of the curriculum, the committee came to the realization "there is a tendency to push ahead," when "our feeling was that we should not see how much they (students) can do, but whether they have a good foundation," Mrs. Mary K. Morris, chairman of the committee, told the board.

"There is a tendency toward literature in sacrifice of other things -- like reading and writing -- because it's so stimulating to go into this," she said.

"We were quite distressed to see not a lot of outside reading is done: There doesn't seem to be reading for reading's sake," she said.

The report commended the faculty for their "competence, dedication, and creative ability" and for their "flexibility."

But it also expressed concern that "there does not appear to be adequate testing of students, once they arrive at the high school, to make sure their progress is adequate in both reading and composition.

"About half the graduates of Carmel High School are now transferring to Monterey Peninsula College for their lower division studies." The report said 58 percent of the Carmel High graduates who took the Standard English Cooperative Test of achievement last summer failed to qualify for freshman English course equivalents of those courses offered at California universities and colleges.

The committee made the following recommendations for the high school English program:

-- That arrangements be made for testing of all students at the end of the sophomore year in reading and composition.

-- That another test to administered at the end of the junior year for those students either low in reading or in expression at the end of their sophomore year.

-- That the counseling staff and English department inquire into use of recent tests, "which appear to be more accurate measures of achievement in reading and composition skills than older tests."

-- Requirements that instruction in reading and composition be included as components of all high school English courses.

-- Exploration of the possibility of introducing a learning center for remediation in reading and composition.

-- More emphasis on students' learning "how to develop evidence for argumentation and exposition," in preference to "rapping" with teachers.

"Although we agree in principle with the directed reading course, encouraging students to read in an individualized program and exposing them to a variety of books in the library, our investigation leads us to believe consideration should be given to more structure," the committee report said.

"At the present time, there seems to be a minimum of direction, with some students remaining at the same reading level throughout the semester. We do not find the controls sufficient to satisfy the aims of the course provided in the description."

THE REPORT recommended that grading of papers by instructors should point out "errors in mechanics which should be corrected under supervision."

Mrs. Romaine Hill, chairman of the Carmel High English department, told the board she was ready and willing to move toward a more structured English program, if that is its desire. The board accepted the report as an information item without any action.

But Mrs. Hill said in a prepared statement that the members of the English department, "feel their (the committee's) evaluation of class procedures should have been founded on actual and extensive class visits, that their statistics concerning Carmel students' testing results in the MPC English department are grossly misleading, that their recommendation for a learning center for reading and writing might profitably have been discussed with the department chairman, and that some of their recommendations have been a part of the curriculum for a number of years."

Mrs. Hill pointed to recent results of state reading tests in which Carmel senior students scored in the top 10 percent in answer to the committee recommendation that more emphasis be given to reading instruction.

"All sophomore students are carefully screened their entire 10th year and are required to register for a semester's course in composition the following year if their sophomore teachers so recommend. We believe that a year's observation by a closely associated English teacher is a more valuable measuring stick than an objective test."

Students tested last summer at MPC, Mrs. Hill said, had not taken the Scholastic Aptitude Test, or had taken it and scored less than 450. This placement test is objective in nature and does not require a writing sample.

"After reading the committee's report in regard to the test at MPC, we took the list of students who had been tested and made judgement as to how many we considered would have qualified for the freshman English course. Our judgement coincided with the actual test results," Mrs. Hill said.

She told the board all courses in English at the high school, with the exception of "a carefully screened and recommended group course in reading," next year will include writing and reading.

Research methods and library techniques are taught at both the freshman and sophomore levels, and next year, research methods will be incorporated into the required speech unit at the ninth grade level, she said.

MRS. HILL pointed to "the eternal dilemma of the high school teacher," a lack of time, as a stumbling-block to implementation of the committee recommendation that mechanical errors in papers be corrected under supervision.

"At the high school level, we are required to meet our classes 25 hours every week," she told the board. "We teach five 50-minute classes daily and have a 50-minite period to prepare for these classes. That's 10 minutes for each class. It's a treadmill existence."

She said teachers need more time to spend with students on a one-to-one basis, rather than a reading workshop.

"We are qualified to teach reading and writing both, but not at the breathless pace at which the modern high school teacher lives his professional life," she said.

Mrs. Hill said the high school English department chairman should have realeased time adequately to perform those duties.

"Under the circumstances, we feel as English teachers we can point with pride to the accomplishments of our stduents. We cannot make many avid readers of students who go home every day to non-reading families," she said.

Comments in the committee report on "rapping" between students and instructors are, in the opinion of the English department, "personal matters and should not be discussed in public," Mrs. Hill said.

Trustee Charles Snorf agreed with the committee suggestion for better communication between the middle and high school faculties on instruction.

"We really need to get on that problem and have a meeting between the Middle School and the high school to coordinate," he said.

"After eight years, we're really essentially saying the same thing," declared Trustee Richard Wilsdon, noting a citizens' committee report prepared in 1965 made the same recommendation.

"There's a lack of coordination between departments and buildings, and too many kids coming out with too few skills," he said.

The committee made the following recommendations about the middle school English program:

-- An effort be made toward more uniformity within the middle school program, with "more emphasis on review of skills previously taught, rather than the current effort to see how much advanced work can be learned."

-- Establishment of "definite goals and grade level units," with evaluative tests at the end of each unit.

-- Provision of enough books so home assignments can be made when needed, and so teacher time is not wasted in duplicating materials.

-- The use of teacher aides or high school secretarial classes to duplicate instructional material.

-- More emphasis on mechanics and composition, especially in the sixth and seventh grades.

-- The provision of more time for outside or library reading.

-- Better communication to the public of what is being taught.

-- "Specific reading instruction at all levels until all students read at grade level. There is now little reading instruction as such. We mean reading instruction broken into the component parts of reading, not as exercises in a literature book."

Mrs. E. Taylor, chairman of the language arts program at Carmel Middle School, agreed with most of the committee's recommendations but found several statements "vague and in need of further clarification." These include:

-- "There should be more emphasis on review of skills previously taught, rather than the current effort to see how much advanced work can be learned."

-- "We find repetition of material, usually literature, beginning with grade six." The faculty pointed out the Middle School literature program begins in the seventh grade.

-- "Parental or community criticism of our Middle School program due to a lack of communication on staff's part."

The committee report asked for more emphasis in the elementary grades on "mechanical skills, dictionary skills, penmanship, simple outlining, library and research skills."

No high school gym repairs this year

IT WILL BE at least another year before any major rehabilitation is done to Carmel High School's gymnasium.

Carmel Unified School District trustees, on a three to two vote, decided last night not to spend some $75,000 required for a complete overhaul of the facility.

By their action, trustees also delayed any decision on the question of transferring Carmel Middle School to the present high school, and Carmel High School to the middle school building.

The two questions are inter-related, since the administration maintains the present high school gym, even with major repairs, would still be inadequate for high school use.

Trustees Richard Wilsdon, Mrs. Pamela Smith, and chairman James Miller voted against a motion by board member James Brock for a complete overhaul of the gym. His motion was supported only by trustee Charles Snorf.

"Whatever decision we make will have a strong bearing on whether this facility will be used as a high school facility or a middle school facility," Miller said.

"There's no way it's adequate as a high school facility in the long run; we do need additional space for other than major sports.

"We're really looking at a much larger problem," he said, referring to the question of whether the district should rehabilitate the high school gym before deciding whether it will remain in high school use or be converted to middle school use.

"I'm more adamant against doing anything about it now than before," Miller said. "I would rather take a few more months than do something precipitous. I'm very much opposed to going into any makeshift, patch-up routine."

Trustees have been trying to reach a decision on when, and how, to make the switch of the high school to the middle school, and vice versa, because of overcrowding of the high school and stable or decreasing enrollment at the elementary and middle school levels.

Major improvements to Carmel High School are estimated at $100,000, and it would cost the district some $500,000 to convert the high school to a middle school plant, the administration says.

TO COMPLETE Carmel Middle School for use as a high school facility would cost the district some $2.5 million, although the middle school facility originally was built for use as a high school plant.

"What we're doing is trying to ignore the problem and say going to use the facility for one thing or another." Wilsdon said he was "reluctant" to spend the money to rehabilitate the gym "when we don't know what we're going to use it for."

Walter Hinton, business manager, told trustees it would take $63,000 for a total rehabilitation of the gym and locker rooms. Some additional improvements desired by the physical education department would amount to about $10,000, he said.

"There's no question the building is in rather poor shape, at best." Hinton said. Although spending the money to repair the gym would result in a facility "in pretty fair shape," it still would be inadequate for a good high school program, Hinton said.

Among the deficiencies at the gym are the need to replace the 32-year-old shake roof, which leaks, to repair the wood floor, which is uneven, and to repair the heating system, which is partially responsible for the flooring problem.

"The board has been reluctant to make a decision on the matter because of many uncertainties, including the possibility of complete demolition and replacement of the gym, or possibly the entire high school," an administration report to the board pointed out.

The estimated $63,000 in repair costs (excluding the additional $10,000 desired by coaches) would be less than 10 percent of the replacement cost of the gym. Floor and heating repairs account for $50,750 of the total estimated cost.

The administration report said the costs of repairs such as painting, plumbing, and some carpentry was made by figuring costs of using district maintenance personnel. The use of outside contractors would double those costs.

"THE MOST DIFFICULT part of a complete rehabilitation is that the gym and locker rooms would have to be taken out of service for most of the summer," the report said. "The gym is used constantly throughout the summer and would work extreme hardship on certain programs."

The administration gave the board three possible courses of action:

-- Authorize the administration to advertise for bids for a new high school gym roof and floor.

-- Authorize the administration to proceed with a complete rehabilitation of the gym, including obtaining the necessary bids for roof and floor repairs.

-- Direct the administration to continue using the existing gymnasium, with plans for future demolition and replacement.

"We could renovate it to mint-new condition," Supt. Harris Taylor said. "It's just not big enough."

"There's no possible reason we won't be using that facility for the next 20 to 30 years," Snorf said.

Kenneth Bullock, principal of Carmel High School requested trustees take some action to make the gymnasium locker room area secure because of a series of break-ins.

He asked that the district "at least invest a modest sum of money to at least make the building secure.

"I get tired of explaining to parents why their children's lockers are being broken into. The ripoff is standard procedure, and there's not a thing we can do about it."

Snorf argued that repairs to the roof and floor are "expenses you're going to have to make -- it will cost more if you wait."

Brock moved that the board authorize the administration to proceed with repairs to the floor, roof and heating, and to make the building secure, but later amended it to include a total rehabilitation of the gymnasium.

Mrs. Smith said she wanted to see the recommendations of the physical education teachers before voting on the matter.

Fran Gaver, newly-elected trustee, asked the board from her seat in the audience for some discussion on the question of whether the gym will be used for the high school or for a converted middle school.

"This should be one step in a series of steps toward an ultimate goal -- and we haven't decided what that goal is," Mrs. Smith replied.

"We've got to set the criteria and make the decision," Miller said.

TAYLOR SAID the question the board must resolve is whether the high school facility will be abandoned, and, "will it be a high school, if we keep it.

"The decision is whether we are going to abandon it," he said.

"If we do keep this as a high school, this facility will be difficult to add on to," Miller said. "If we keep it as a high school, we're really not going anywhere by adding a new roof and gym. We can no longer stick our head in the sand and say because these things are expensive, we won't talk about them."

"I recommend you rehabilitate this gymnasium," Taylor said. "You need two gymnasia at this high school. But if this is going to be a middle school, it will probably be adequate."

After trustees voted down the motion to rehabilitate the gym, Taylor said "this means we're going to live with it as it is for another year." But he said necessary repairs to make the gym locker rooms secure could be accomplished administratively, without formal action of the board.

Bloodmobile to visit Carmel Valley Community Center

There will be an American Red Cross Bloodmobile in the Carmel Valley Community Center on Ford Road, from 3 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 17.

"We are most anxious to see our Good Neighbor donors as well as new donors, the pint of blood you give is a great community resource, the lifeline of an effective community blood program. Only you, your family, neighbors, the community, can supply the donations with which the research center can do more," said Mrs Marjorie McKiernon, chairman.

In a recent visit to the newly established American Red Cross-Stanford University Blood Center in Palo Alto, members of the Carmel Chapter Red Cross were conducted on a tour of the new blood gathering agency by Dr. Donald R. Avoy, medical director of the Central California Red Cross Blood Center. The Center is working with the Stanford University Blood Center, which has provided a foundation of advanced medical knowledge in its capacity as one of the most respected research centers in the world.

The American National Red Cross has added over 25 years in bloodbanking, typing, component and advanced hemotology research.

"The American Red Cross Blood Program contributes to the health of the nation by providing over 5,000,000 units of blood and blood products annually," Dr. Avoy said.

"Not everyone can donate blood, but virtually everyone is a potential receiver. Statistics show that about 3 percent of the population is now supplying the millions of units distributed nationally by the American Red Cross.

"Much of the donor blood drawn at the American Red Cross-Stanford University Blood Center is put to immediate use. Donors and their families receive transfusions for surgical, hospital and all other medical needs. A pint donation will cover the needs of family members located almost anywhere in the U.S. for one year.

"Last year the Red Cross announced the development of an advanced method of freezing blood. The American Red Cross-Stanford University Blood Center is the first Red Cross blood center in Northern California to use this modern freezing technique. Frozen blood can be stored for many years. Rare blood types can be drawn and utilized as needed with more common types preserved during periods of oversupply for use during emergencies and scarce periods. In addition to storage benefits, frozen blood has another important advantage. The freezing process seems to eliminate the virus of serum hepatitis and is safer for patients undergoing kidney dialysis treatments."

At the Blood Center, Stanford University and the Red Cross will be working jointly on white cell identification and newer methods for preserving tissues and organs for transplant.

Mrs. Widener to visit

Mary Lee Widener, newly-elected northern chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, and wife of Berkeley Mayor Warren Widener, will participate in a workshop from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at Monterey Peninsula College.

The workshop will be for discussion of election analysis and campaign techniques, and is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Cooperative Society.

The Democratic Women's Club and the Democratic County Central Committee will sponsor an 8 p.m. meeting at the Estrada Adobe in Monterey in which Mrs. Widener will speak on 1974 campaign strategy.

SHAVING TIPS

Hair on the face grows in a direction, like the hair on our heads. For a more comfortable shave tomorrow morning, shave in the direction your beard grows. When we shave against the growth we get razor burn and, oftentimes, nicks which require use of a styptic pencil.

Remember ... be kind to your face and it will be kind to you.

WHERE CARMEL VALLEY ROAD MEETS HIWAY 1

REMEMBER WHEN?

50 YEARS AGO:

From The Pine Cone, May 5, 1923

THE THREE-CORNERED controversy involving the ownership of the Carmel postoffice building has been adjusted out of court.

The parties to the dispute were T.W. Morgan Jr., represented by attorney Argyll Campbell; W.H. Abbott of Pebble Beach, represented by Fred Treat, and T.A. Oakes of Santa Cruz, represented by Hudson, Martin and Jorgenson.

The settlement resulted in the new building being turned over to Morgan, who now has clear title thereto.

The Pine Cone's "squawk" in a recent issue, concerning bad road conditions on Carmel Hill, entitled "Do Not Pass the Buck Gentlemen," is bearing fruit.

Supervisor J.L.D. Roberts announces that within a short time work will begin on the improvement and repair of the road between here and Monterey.

Building activities in Carmel suffered something of a setback last Tuesday, the opening day of the trout fishing season. Many mechanics took the day off. Other Carmelites who spent the day along the stream included Ernest Schweninger, Harry Aucourt, and Fred Leidig.

The week of May 14 to 20 will be celebrated the country over as Boys' Week to arouse an interest amongst our citizens generally to the importance of moral and sympathetic guidance of our boys -- who can so easily be led either into right or wrong paths.

25 YEARS AGO:

From The Pine Cone, April 30, 1948

A MONTH-OLD, hotly-contested issue was brought to a close on Monday, when the County Planning Commission at a meeting in Salinas denied Mrs. Marcella Cisney's plea for permission to establish a summer theatre at the Mission Ranch.

"There is a gardener working full time in the park at Mission and Ocean" says Police Chief Roy Fraties, "but the high-school and grammar-school kids are always one jump ahead." Baseball and football games after school are damaging the shrubbery, and the goldfish are a little under the weather from being fished for, the Street Superintendant reports.

The Pine Cone has been asked by Chief Fraties to publish an appeal to young athletes and budding Isaac to enjoy it, and so that the goldfish may go without fear.

"Carmel is one of the most American of communities, in the best sense of the word," said Langston Hughes in an interview Tuesday afternoon at Noel Sullivan's Hollow Hills Farm. Here, he feels he has done some of his best work, in an atmosphere free from discrimination, and where the artist is judged by his work alone.

Victor Brune has decided that he should leave Carmel or Carmel should leave him; whichever it is, he's going to make the first move by going to San Francisco and thence leaving for Mexico. Says he needs a new kind of native around him.

10 YEARS AGO:

From The Pine Cone, May 2, 1963

TUESDAY NIGHT the hottest drum in town burned down the Girl Scout house.

A roaring, malevolent fire which completely gutted the interior of the old structure at Lincoln and Sixth was apparently born when a bongo drum standing alongside a floor furnace in the west end of the auditorium toppled -- or was knocked over -- onto the furnace grate.

We proposed last week that Sunset School should become a center of the seven arts, or an arts and sciences center; and we proposed further that the city should participate only as a paternal and not as a proprietary agency. We also stated our fervent belief that such a use, imaginatively developed, would create a renaissance in Carmel which would be cultural, social and economic in its extent.

We believe this, although we are not so sure that today Carmel possesses the energy, imagination or -- most important -- the common purpose to bring it off. Nonetheless, it represents such an urgent matter (I wish that somehow the command of that adjective could be made stronger) that it must be attempted.

Eric Barker, Big Sur poet, will give a reading at Ring's, 565 Abrego Street, Monterey, on Sunday, 12 May, at 2:30 p.m.

FOR SALE: Ocean view from this attractive, 1 bedroom home. Large living room, beamed ceiling and fireplace, stove and refrigerator included. Price $19,000.

VERY MODERN, NEW TWO BEDROOM, TWO BATH HOME, designed by Henry Hill. 1 block south of Ocean Avenue. $32,500.

Expanded summer program approved

Carmel Unified School District trustees approved a summer school program last week which includes new courses at the elementary school level in "enrichment" activities such as pottery, crafts, drama, dance, science, nature study and ecology.

The expanded summer program is the result of a survey form distributed to parents of children enrolled in the kindergarden through fifth grade levels in the district.

Parents were asked to check certain suggested activities and to submit ideas of their own. A total of 380 responses was received, which indicated a strong preference for courses in music, pottery, crafts, drama and related courses.

The program as approved by trustees includes these elements:

-- Encouragement of participation of students currently enrolled in the sixth through 11th grade level to participate in the Pacific Grove and Monterey summer school programs. The Carmel school district staff will assume the responsibility for counseling, enrollment, and transportation of interested students.

-- Reading programs in the kindergarten through third grade level at Tularcitos and River schools along lines afforded in last year's summer program. There will be two elementary school classes with two teachers and two aides for four hours per day, offering reading instruction for some 40 students.

-- A wide array of courses in the kindergarten through eighth grade level at Tularcitos, Middle and Carmel High schools. These include swimming and tennis for eight weeks, with three teachers and 13 aides; science, nature study, and ecology with three two-week sessions of four hours daily with two teachers and a parent aide; pottery and crafts with three two-week sessions of two teachers and a parent aide; drama and dance for four hours daily with one teacher and one aide at Tularcitos and River schools.

-- Instrumental music in the fourth through eighth grades at River, Tularcitos, and Carmel High schools.

-- The Carmel High School music program and driver education for grades nine through 12.

The total estimated cost to the district of the summer program is $18,000.

In other business, the board:

-- Accepted the retirement of Enid Palmerlee, a kindergarten teacher at Carmelo School, who has taught in the district for 12 years.

-- Accepted the resignation of Joan Dubrasich, social studies teacher at Carmel Middle School for the past two years.

-- Accepted the resignation of Mrs. Lee Reeves, first grade teacher at River School.

-- Deferred action on a request by Neil Smith, first grade teacher at River School, for a leave of absence for the second half of the 1973-74 school year.

Planners approve proposed ordinance

A PROPOSED ordinance which would provide the city planning commission with clearly-defined criteria in design review, was approved by resolution and referred to the city council for action by planners at their monthly study session last Wednesday.

Former City Atty. Bill Burleigh, in doing research on design review ordinances, concluded that Carmel's ordinance was not completely safe, so former Asst. City Atty. Donald G. Freeman drafted "an ordinance that would be completely safe in the event it was ever challenged."

Among others, one purpose of the ordinance is to "conserve the city's natural beauty and visual character and charm by insuring that structures, signs and other improvements are properly related to their sites, and to surrounding sites and structures, with due regard to the aesthetic qualities of a natural terrain and landscaping, and that proper attention is given to exterior appearances of structures, signs and other improvements."

The ordinance further states that "the Design Review Board (the commission acting as a whole) shall consider all site plans, architectural developments, and all color and material of exteriors in all commercial districts, excluding single family residences, and all developments in residential districts which require use permits, including the following: site developments; landscaping; construction; remodeling and rebuilding; color and material of exteriors; awnings; signs and display cases, and floodlighting and other exterior lighting."

The proposed measure also lists the criteria and standards which would be used by the commission in reviewing plans, drawings, sketches and other documents relating to the development of site and building plans.

Planning commission members, acting as the board of adjustments, unanimously granted a use permit to Ralph Stean for the construction of six apartments at Mission between 4th and 5th.

The commission's land use committee, whose report was unanimously adopted, stated that the apartment development will not obstruct the normal flow of traffic in the commercial area; the development is in scale with other developments in this area; that the character of the neighborhood will not be changed by the project, and that the use is trivial and unobjectionable and a reasonable liberty to allow the property owner.

THE DEVELOPMENT'S interior and exterior design, however, will have to come before the commission's design review committee.

Another report of the land use committee was unanimously adopted and a use permit was denied to Chester A. McCourt and Walter J. Magnoni who had requested a permit to create three building sites from two and one-half lots of record on the east side of Crespi between Flanders and Mountain View.

Land use committee members found the plan for subdivision does meet the requirements of the municipal code, but that "lots of record in this block are larger in area due to the steep terrain; that the number of original lots in this block was 25; that there are presently 25 building sites in this block; that there are 14 irregular shaped lots in this block; that Crespi Avenue is a 40 foot right of way which is not constructed to full width, and that there are three parties living in the area that object to the subdivision of the property."

In the opinion of the land use committee, "the proposed subdivision of this property would create an additional building site within this block. The original subdivision provided larger lots due to the steep terrain and the canyon area behind the properties. To maintain the character of this neighborhood and prevent further congestion of people and automobiles and to maintain the present densities within the city, the Land Use Committee recommends that this use permit be denied."

In other business, the planning commission approved the design of an exit stairway from the second and third stories of the Sea View Inn (at Camino Real between 11th and 12th) and approved the design of two signs for the Secret Garden (Dolores between 5th and 6th).

"SUDDEN SHOWER" is an etching by Jeanette Lewis which may be seen in her one-man show in the Center Room of the Carmel Art Association throughout the month of May.

Unusual shows at Art Association

The month of May brings two new and unusual one-man shows to the Carmel Art Association. Wayne Dye's exhibit of oil paintings is hung in the Beardsley Room while the Center Room features the etchings of Jeannette Maxfield Lewis.

Wayne Dye, a resident of the Peninsula since 1954, is a member of the Society of Western Artists, American Artist's Professional League and the Santa Cruz Art Association. His art studies began at Fox-Morgan Art Institute in Oakland, after which he followed a career in commercial art until he moved to Monterey and began working in pastels.

He studied here under Pio Junco and later, Abel Warshawsky. Several years ago he turned to working in oils and has had several one-man shows in Monterey, Santa Cruz, Los Gatos and San Leandro. In November of 1963 he was involved in a head-on auto accident which paralyzed his arms and legs, and threatened to pull down the curtain on his artistic career. But he did not let that stop him. By working out an ingenious system of weights and pulleys, arm rests and rubber balls which balance his paint brushes, he is able to paint again, as this show testifies.

Jeannette Lewis, who combines home and studio in Pebble Beach, was born in Oakland and studied at the San Francisco School of Fine Arts, in New York City, and with Armin Hansen in Monterey. She has exhibited at the Argent Gallery, New York City; Palace of the Legion of Honor and the de Young Museum in San Francisco; in Memphis, Tenn.; and Stockton, San Jose and Fresno as well as here on the Peninsula.

She is a member of American Society of Graphic Artists, California Society of Etchers, American Federation of Arts and Society of Western Artists among many others and is listed in "Who's Who in American Art," and has received numerous awards from societies of graphic arts across the country. Her showing of etchings in the Center Room and the Beardsley Room exhibit of Wayne Dye's oils will be open to the public daily from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Carmel Art Association, 6th and Dolores.

Friends of Photography features two exhibits

The Friends of Photography announces two exhibitions: Terry Wild and Anthony Hernandez from May 12 through June 10 and a group showing of non-silver photography from May 9 through June 10.

The works of Anthony Hernandez and Terry Wild will be exhibited in the South Gallery. Both men are intensely interested in the physical and human environment. They have both exhibited at the Pasadena Museum of Modern Art and at the University of California at Davis, in the "California Photographers 1970" and the "Crowded Vacancy" exhibitions, and in group shows at the Oakland Museum.

Most of their previously exhibited work was done in Los Angeles. The present showing will explore such diverse ground as Vietnam and Pennsylvania.

Anthony Hernandez, a young Los Angeles photographer, was the recipient of the 1972 Ferguson Grant, administered annually by the Friends of Photography. He used the $1,500 grant to return to Vietnam, where he was stationed in 1968, and to photograph life on Vietnamese city streets -- an extension of the work he has done here and in Europe.

This exhibition features work from his trip, during which he captured in Vietnamese culture and people the same revealing fractions of time that he photographs in this country.

Originally from Delaware, Terry Wild spent several years in Los Angeles at the Art Center College of Design studying and pursuing on film the incongruities in man-made and natural creations. Nearly two years ago he moved to Pennsylvania and taught and photographed. The body of work in the present exhibition grows out of the change and reveals a very personal sense of being at one with his new landscape and its people.

Concurrent with the Wild-Hernandez exhibition will be an exhibit of non-silver photography in the North Gallery from May 9 through June 10. Guest curator is teacher - photographer Darryl Curran of Los Angeles. Curran received his MFA in photography in 1964 from UCLA. He is currently assistant professor of art at California State University at Fullerton.

The non-silver techniques represented will include platinum and gum bichromate printing, cyanotypes, collage plus film, 3-M color transfers, photographic intaglio and stuffed photo linen.

Platinum printing was fashionable from the mid-1870's through the early 1920's, at which time the use of light-sensitive platinum was largely discontinued due to its increasing scarcity and cost.

Platinum prints are rarely seen or made at present. They are warm-toned prints of great delicacy and have unequaled "scale," or gradations, between the low tones which make up the scale between black and-middle grey. Photographer Terry Thompson has included several platinum prints in the exhibition, some of which have been combined with gum bichromate printing.

Gum bichromate was used primarily in the early 1900's. A mixture of gum and potassium bichromate, bonded with one or more colors, is applied to watercolor paper and allowed to dry. The negative, placed on the light-sensitive chemical, is printed in direct sunlight. The print is "developed" by washing it in warm water.

Many successive applications, printings and developings of gum bichromate are required to attain the desired depth of tone. The artists in the exhibition utilizing this medium are Robert von Sternberg, Terry Thompson, Stephen Josefsberg, John Lawrence, Todd Walker, Darryl Durran, Rodger Hudson Klein and Gayle Smalley.

A technique new to the photographic community is the use of the 3-M color machine. The 3-M allows great flexibility in the creation and composition of color prints. By overprinting and other compositional techniques, prints can be created and color dialed-in at will. An image can even be superimposed several times by storing images in the system's memory bank. A black and white negative can be reproduced as any color in the spectrum. The photographers in the exhibition who have included prints made with the 3-M machine are Brian Miller, Dr. Arthur Taussig and Ellen Landweber.

Among the more unusual works on display will be three-dimension works, by Gayle Smalley, Peggy Kerr and Kay Shuper, made through the use of stuffed photo-sensitized linen and mixed photographic techniques sewn into plastic.

The preview for both exhibitions will be held from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Friday, May 11. The public is cordially invited to attend. Normal gallery hours are from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. For further information please call 624-6330.

Egg tempera by Robert Clark

A one-man show of the paintings in egg tempera of Robert Clark opens May 12 at the Zantman Galleries and continues through June 5.

Opening night is from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, May 12.

Clark, a resident of Cambria, was born in Minneapolis, Minn., and attended the Minneapolis School of Art. His studies were interrupted by service during World War II. After the war, he resumed his studies at the Walker School of Art in Minneapolis.

In 1948, he became a resident of California, and in 1952 joined the staff of the Long Beach Museum of Art. He also served as a member of the Los Angeles Museum of History, Science and Art, where he completed more than 20 large-scale backgrounds for natural history dioramas.

After leaving the museum, he did several mural commissions, including a painting of "The Resurrection" for Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale, and the environmental murals for the Anheuser-Busch Co., in Van Nuys.

"Sometimes," Clark says, "the land is so beautiful in its colors and contours, so majestic in its proportions that it easily seduces the artist's eye.

"Too often that very beauty makes the artist tend to prettify; to accept exactly what he sees rather than suffer the process of distillation.

"It is a suffering, and it's difficult, but I've learned to see the particular instead of the general. Perhaps that explains why so many of my paintings become intimate portraits, concerned with the smaller aspects of a subject.

"Still, I believe that all the elements: the land's configuration, the seasons, even the buildings — man's touch — fit together in a certain harmonic order.

"But the land, like people, presents many faces. It may be lean and spare, lush and opulent, tangled and unkempt, or prim and tailored. Its varying moods can reflect light and happiness or they may speak in terms of ominous gloom.

"At other times there is another emotion vaguely sensed. It can only be called a suspension — timelessness. It's as though everything that has ever been still is, and everything that is to come is already here.

"Then, the buildings, too, become protean things. They offer so many different aspects, depending upon the time of day and the season of the year. But no matter what the season or slant of the sun, they always remind me of prior times and past experiences. It seems, somehow, that they are almost defiant; challenging us to a response, insisting that we feel their beginning and their spirit.

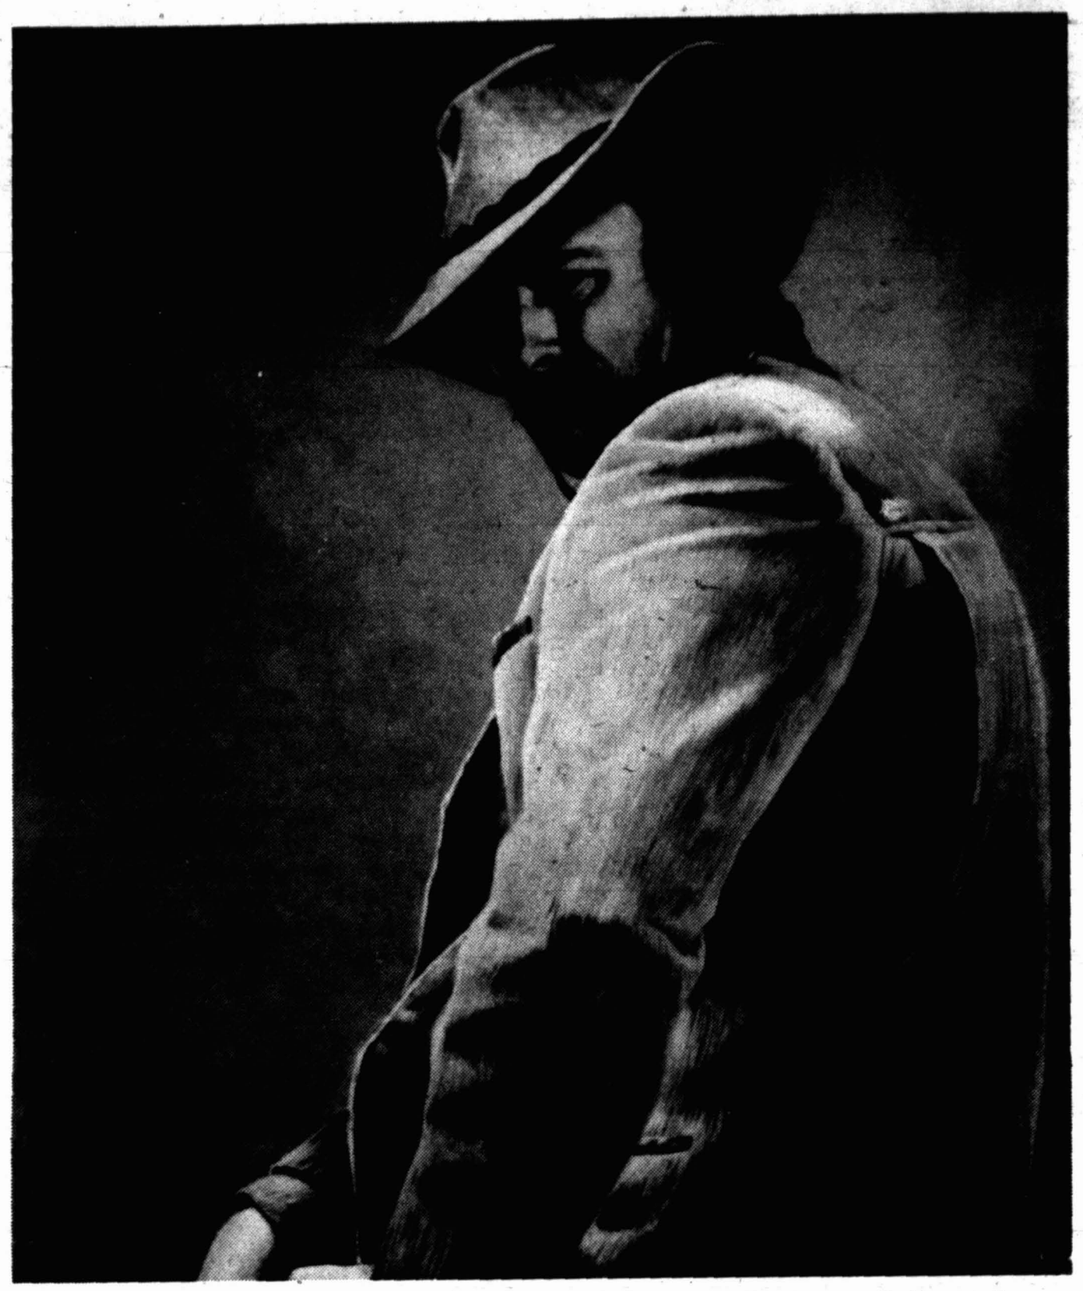
"For many years I've been involved with the necessary observing, thinking and planning that goes into the making of a successful painting. But there's another factor which has become increasingly important — feeling.

"When I was much younger I used to look for the ideal composition just waiting to be painted. I found, of course, that it rarely, if ever, exists.

"But through experience and a developed perception my sensibilities have sharpened, and now when I approach a subject I realize that frequently I retain more the feeling — the impression of an area — rather than a set of facts.

"That is the intuitive part, and I hope to preserve it while at the same time methodically building an effective structure to house my concept.

"To me, it is important to create a sense of order within my paintings. And I believe that those who appreciate my work, consciously or unconsciously respond to that order."



"STUDY IN BROWN," one of the egg tempera paintings in Robert Clark's exhibition at Zantman Gallery, is an arresting self-portrait.

Sunset views:

Lebanese exhibit draws crowd

By FRANK H. RILEY, director
Community and Cultural Affairs

IT TOOK a little while to catch on, but by the middle of the month attendance at our "Contemporary Art from Lebanon" exhibit was building; and during the last week of the one-month show, many of you came to see it and expressed your delight.

The show closed on Saturday and has now been replaced by an exhibit of prize winning photos on the theme, "Interdependence," which has been arranged by the local United Nations Association. The photos will remain in The Marjorie Evans Gallery through the afternoon concert on May 13. Perhaps an early start might be advisable to avoid missing this one. Regular hours for The Marjorie Evans Gallery are from 2 p.m.-5 p.m. every day but Saturday and Sunday, with special openings one hour before each performance in the Sunset Center Theatre.

The Theatre itself will be the focal point for several notable events in the coming week. Tomorrow, for example, Explorama, the adventure-travel films people, bring to Carmel a special feature offered in addition to their regular series. This is entitled, "Rome and the Italians." It has been produced and will be narrated in person by Gene Wiancko. In addition to the classic wonders of the Eternal City, it will made side excursions into Venice, Florence, Lake Como, and the villages of Tuscany. Advance tickets are available at Julia Marlowe - Tickets in Sunset's Room 8A or at the door beginning at 7:15 p.m. on the night of the performance.

At 8:00 p.m. Saturday, the Carmel Music Society presents the internationally renowned young violin prodigy, Lilit Gampel. Those of you who have season tickets be sure to adjust your thinking to the correct date. Originally scheduled for another time, the Gampel concert was moved to Saturday, May 5, in order that Miss Gampel could appear on national television with Artur Rubenstein. This young artist has already established herself as a virtuoso and is undoubtedly headed for a prodigious future. Her is your opportunity to enjoy her work as she cements the foundations of her career.

BUT THAT'S not all, for on Monday, May 7, the Monterey County Symphony under Maestro Haymo Taeuber presents its final formal concert of the 1972-73 season at 8 p.m. in Sunset Center Theatre. Featured artists for this program will be the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society with soloists Patrick Duval, Norma Jean Hodges, and James Tippey. With cheers still ringing for The Choral Society's recent "Messiah," this concert should attract a sell-out audience. If you want to attend, we advise that you call Vi Beahan early - she might be able to arrange a ticket for you!

A new yoga class (Hittleman sponsorship, Lore Kuhns, instructor) begins May 8. You probably can still enroll. Call Lore at 624-0919 to make arrangements. Also, Bob Horne and associated artists have expanded their teaching schedule of painting, drawing and life classes. The scheduling is adaptable and so can accommodate those who have to lead lives with odd-ball hours. Contact Bob at 624-1330 to get full details on the various possibilities.

In the meantime if your organization needs a room for a meeting, or if you would like to hold a social event without tearing up the living room, call us. We have several rooms that can be rented for such events.

'Interdependence' photo exhibit opens today

Interdependence between people, races and countries and the need for real relationships within families and neighborhoods is the theme of a new photographic exhibit which opens today at Sunset Center.

"Interdependence" will be on display at the center through May 13 at the Marjorie Evans Gallery.

On that date, the Monterey Peninsula United Nations Association will hold a reception from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. to meet the entrants and judges.

The regular viewing hours for the gallery are from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Saturday and Sunday, and one hour before each performance at Sunset Center.

Prizes will be offered by the UNA and by all the camera shops on the Monterey Peninsula.

The show focuses on people of various nations, backgrounds and races and their need for healthy relationships with each other.

Judges will be Roger Fremier of Carmel, Henry Gilpin, Ronald James, and Jerry Lebeck of the Monterey Peninsula College photography department.

Included in the list of entries is Sister Adele of Dominican College in San Rafael, whose work was exhibited lat year at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

Doris Beezley of Pebble Beach, who studied in Carmel, a former UNESCO advisor in Africa, will also show her work, as well as some of her documentary photographs.

How to design banners

Celebration banners will be the subject of a second "how-to-do-it" workshop presented in a 30-minute telecast by Irene Lagorio, 7:30 p.m. Friday on the MPTV Cable "Gallery 13" show.

Miss Lagorio will introduce the program with a group of banners specifically designed and fabricated for basic home decoration use, emphasizing such design elements as color and form.

She will follow with a step-by-step demonstration of how one of these banners was constructed, using her name as the design motif, and will conclude with specially-prepared drawings of banners in use for festive occasions.

Miss Lagorio conducts annual University of California summer art workshops for teachers, and has conducted specialized workshops at various art museums throughout the state.

For viewers wishing follow-up information, an outline of directions as presented in the program will be distributed upon written request through MPTV Cable Channel 13 after the show.

"FASCHING SPIRIT" is the name of this photo taken in Germany by Doris Beezley of Pebble Beach and now on exhibit at Sunset Center.

Chamber Music Society auditions

May 12 and 13 the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society will hold its second annual competition for young chamber music groups.

Auditions will take place Saturday afternoon and the two groups winning first and second prize will be asked to perform on the society's last concert of the season Sunday afternoon.

The auditions, which began last year, are patterned after the Coleman Awards in Pasadena, although on a much more modest scale. They are open to non-professional ensembles from Central and Northern California and are intended to encourage serious young musicians up to the age of 25 and to provide them with an appreciative audience. Likewise, the Chamber Music Society hopes in this manner to introduce to music lovers on the Peninsula promising new talent.

The panel of judges presiding over the auditions on Saturday afternoon consists of Corrick Brown, conductor of the Santa Rosa Symphony Orchestra, Bay Area musician and adjucator for Young People's Symphony contests; Erno Daniel, pianist and professor of Music at the university of California, Santa Barbara, chamber music coach, member of the Schoenfeld-Daniel Trio; Robert Hughes, composer, teacher, conductor and lecturer, assistant conductor of the Oakland Symphony, bassoonist; Rosario Mazzeo, musician-educator, inventor, author and lecturer, member of the faculty of the University of California, Santa Cruz, clarinetist with the Crown Trio; Gabor Rejto, chairman of the string department, University of Southern California, summer faculty member of the Music Academy of the West, Santa Barbara, cellist soloist and member of the Alma Trio.

Both auditions and concert will take place in Carmel's Sunset Auditorium at 3 p.m. Saturday, May 12, and Sunday, May 13, respectively.

The auditions on Saturday are open to the public free of charge. Tickets for the concert presented by the winners on Sunday afternoon will be available at the door at $2 for general admissions and $1 for students and military personnel.

Gateway Center plans expansion

The Monterey County Association for the Retarded, Inc. has announced plans for the expansion of the Gateway Center for the Retarded in Seaside.

The long-range emphasis will be upon the contruction of a resident care center needed for the mentally handicapped residents of the county 18 years of age and older.

Local residents active in the association as board trustees include John Wecker, Thomas D'Angelo, and Joseph Gulla, all of Carmel, and Bon Reynolds of Pebble Beach.

The board of trustees is sponsoring a public education program and an appeal for support throughout the county.

Gateway Center has an activities center for daytime use by patients 18 or older who engage in limited work training, such as furniture stripping, packaging, collating, envelope stuffing, and assembly jobs.

The first step in the proposed Gateway project is to formulate building designs for a new facility to augment existing units, said Frank Feliz, spokesman for the association.

The new Gateway project is designed to accommodate up to 50 retarded persons and will be coeducational.

"The need for such a facility has a first priority in Monterey County, in view of the problem facing statewide communities throughout the California state government's expressed policy of phasing down the state's mental hospitals," Feliz said.

Those interested in additional information on the Gateway Center project should contact P.O. Box 1403, Monterey, or call the Gateway Center, at 394-0770.

Zoning hearing

A public hearing will be held May 30 by the Monterey County Planning Commission in Salinas on proposed permanent zoning of an area adjoining Carmel Highlands to the east.

At its regular meeting last Wednesday, county planners set the date, but not the time, for the hearing. The location, land, area, properties in the area are zoned for one-acre under temporary zoning.

The planning staff proposal is for permanent zoning of two and one-half acres per unit.

LILIT GAMPEL

Lilit Gampel to perform

Lilit Gampel, the 13-year-old violinist proclaimed as a child prodigy, will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at Sunset Center under the auspices of the Carmel Music Society.

It is the last concert of the season presented by the society, the date having been changed from May 19 to May 5.

On September 29, 1972, Lilit celebrated her 13th birthday in a way it's safe to say few other young Americans, newly-arrived at their teens, would dream of. On that date, Lilit was the soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic at a special post-season concert at the Hollywood Bowl, playing the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto under the baton of Andre Kostelanetz. The occasion added to the laurels she had already won in an earlier appearance with the orchestra, when she had played the Bruch G Minor Violin Concerto with it in its regular home, Los Angeles' Music Center, under the direction of Zubin Mehta the previous February.

In 1970, when she was 10, Lilit had won the Young Musicians Foundation Competition in Los Angeles that numbers among its previous winners, pianists Van Cliburn and Mischa Dichter. It is a competition that usually accepts no applicants under 18, and she was the youngest winner in its history.

Everyone who has heard her has attempted to engage her on the spot. When the conductor Josef Krips heard her in January 1972 in San Francisco when she appeared as soloist with Gary Bertini conducting the Israel Chamber Orchestra in the Mozart Concerto No. 4 in D Major, he exclaimed, "Magnificent. I heard Erica Morini when she was a child and this is the same story all over again. Whom do I talk to about engaging her to play with me?"

In a determination to prevent her talent and the demand for it from engulfing her, her parents, Leonard and Eva Gampel, physicist and bio-chemist, respectively, have limited the number of appearances to which they will consent. For the most part, those that they do are limited to or near the West Coast, which do not require a great deal of time away from school. She has thus been heard with the San Diego, Seattle, Tucson and Phoenix Symphonies, and has given a number of recitals in the same general area. In November 1972, over the long Thanksgiving weekend this policy was relaxed to let her make her European debut in a series of appearances with the distinguished Dutch Orchestra, the Concertgebouw.

As a first grader, Lilit used to walk home from school alone. Her mother noticed that she was arriving a little later each day, and one day, when she had not come home until 5 p.m, she announced she was going to take violin lessons. Her father laughed because she had never been able to carry a tune. "I hear it in my head," she explains, "but it comes out different." Her mother said she'd think about the idea. That evening a Mrs. Elizabeth Mills, a violin teacher called. She wanted to know when Lilit could start her training. It turned out that Mrs. Mills' house, where she gave her lessons, was on Lilit's route home from school, and passing and hearing music, she had for several days stopped outside to listen. Finally she knocked on the door and asked for lessons.

Mrs. Mills had just returned from a trip to Japan where she had observed the new Suzuki method of violin instructions for very young children, and though she did not usually teach children, she was anxious to try it. She persuaded the Gampels to let Lilit start lessons with a 1/16 size violin she owned. That spring, when the Gampels attended Mrs. Mills' Student Recital, they expected her to play something like "Mary Had A Little Lamb." Instead, she played Vivaldi.

Later when Lilit changed from Mrs. Mills' Suzuki class and began private lessons with Alice Schoenfeld, a former child prodigy herself, her parents thought she would lose interest because there wouldn't be any more Suzuki games, just scales. "That just made me like it even more," she says. Lilit continues her studies with Miss Schoenfeld on scholarship in the music department of the University of Southern California.

Herbert Heron-Jack London play

An early Carmel legend was revived last weekend with news of the world premiere performances of the long lost play, "Gold," by Jack London and Herbert Heron, one-time Carmel mayor, who collaborated in 1910 and later revised the play in 1913.

Mrs. Valerie Heron, widow of the playwright, director, actor and poet, attended the opening performance, "as was his custom," in the heart of the gold country at Jackson.

Heron founded Carmel's Forest Theater, situated on a concave hillside near the center of town, and for 50 years produced original plays by contemporary playwrights such as Jack London and by Shakespeare.

London was an occasional visitor to Carmel where there was a writer's colony which included Heron, Mary Austin, George Sterling, Henry Leon Wilson and others.

Following his two-year voyage on the "Snark" he and his wife came to Carmel where he met Heron whose half-brother, Cloudsley Johns, was his lifelong friend.

A search in 1965 for lost works by Jack London by James E. Sisson III, led to the U.S. Copyright Office, where he was able to get a microfilm copy of "Gold."

He contacted Herbert Heron in 1966 but before an appointment could be arranged, was shocked to hear of his death in The Carmel Pine Cone.

The play "Gold" was published late in 1972 in a limited edition by the Holmes Book Co. of Oakland.

The setting for "Gold" is the Klondike, one of London's richest veins, and concerns itself with the search for gold in character as well as wealth.

Bach Festival housing needed

The Carmel Bach Festival office would like to hear from persons who might consider taking some out-of-town musicians into their homes in July.

Those who have done so in past seasons have found it a mutually pleasant experience.

Housing will be needed for participants in this year's Festival, which is scheduled for July 16-29. Members of the orchestra and chorale groups begin arriving in Carmel July 4 for rehearsals. They will require housing until July 29 or 30. Individual rooms as well as some family units will be needed, preferably within walking distance of Sunset Center. Large houses are also acceptable.

Householders interested in providing accomodations are invited to call the Bach Festival office, 624-1521, for further information.

Mime theatre presented

Three evenings of mime theatre by Jan Kessler will be presented at 8:30 p.m. today through Saturday at the Pacific Grove Art Center, in the main gallery at 568 Lighthouse Ave.

The programs will range from pieces in the zestful, poetic mode of the 500 year-old Commedia dell' Arte, to modern satirical sketches. Music for the mime shows will be composed, arranged and performed by Dora Kessler. David Rouslin appears as assisting mime artist.

Kessler, who has recently become a movement coach and artistic consultant with the San Francisco Ballet Company and whose last performance was for Joan Baez at her Institute For The Study of Non-Violence in Palo Alto, is one of the recent staff additions to the Pacific Grove Art Center's rapidly expanding program of community activities. Tickets are available at the Art Center.

Along with future mime shows and Kessler's movement classes, Art Center director Jean Darragh has added classes in yoga, weaving, modern dance, ballet, piano, photography, painting, pottery, sculpture, seascape and watercolor painting, and workshops for children in puppetry, theatre, music and art.

Jean Bellmer gets art prize

Jean Bellmer of Carmel has won a $75 first-place award for a watercolor entitled "Solitude" in the 43rd Annual Statewide Exhibition by the Santa Cruz Art League.

Dates of the exhibition are April 15 through May 6 at 526 Broadway in Santa Cruz. James Peter Cost of Carmel is one of four judges in the competition.

Filming at Big Sur

'Zandy's Bride' is an atypical western

By ROBERT MISKIMON

BIG SUR – Love and hate, and the intricate balance between the two in a male-female relationship, is the crux of "Zandy's Bride," the Warner Brothers movie starring Liv Ullmann and Gene Hackman being filmed here.

Ms. Ullmann, who came to Hollywood with impressive credentials after being a major actress with Swedish film director Ingmar Bergman in such films as "The Passion of Anna," "Persona," "Shame," and "Hour of the Wolf," says she considers herself "primarily a stage actress."

"The fun with movies is to travel around and work with actors and directors I admire," she said during a break in filming Tuesday.

Ms. Ullmann said her interest in acting blossomed when she was a child.

"I think it's fun. When I was a child, I thought it was fun to play the parts of different people. I've been doing it quite a long time now, and I've learned some techniques to make it a craft–to make it something you go on with.

"Acting is a way of communication. A lot of people become actors because they want to communicate," she said, although she admitted she's not interested in seeing her movies after they're finished.

Ms. Ullmann said her work with Bergman taught her the importance of combining professionalism with a joy in acting.

"He's very professional, and he expects everyone to have a very professional approach; but it was fun, too. He gives quite a lot of fun in the work."

Ms. Ullmann said she detects a shift in the type of films which appeal to American audiences away from the "fantastic" toward more realistic movies.

"The pictures which I consider dangerous for young people are 'The Sound of Music' type pictures, that make people think bells will ring when they're in love," she said.

"Life isn't 'The Sound of Music'," she said, although admitting she believes too much violence on the screen can be equally as damaging.

"Too much violence on the screen does influence people," she said. "Not in one picture, or in two pictures. But when audiences only see where reality is romanticized, it's not good."

She believes American films have tended to stress escapist, romantic elements, whereas European films have tended to focus on realistic aspects of life.

"There's room for those pictures too (romantic films), but I wish more films would show there's something more important in life. To never find that romantic world is terrible.

"After seeing romantic movies, people must be educated."

Ms. Ullmann believes television "is not what it should be," and too often serves merely to "brain-wash" people into believing they must have certain products to be happy.

"The more you see those commercials about hair spray, you begin to believe the man will never love you unless you use it."

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION II

MS. ULLMANN drew a parallel between the type of story in "Zandy's Bride" and the works of August Strindberg, Swedish dramatist, who "wrote about hate relationships between men and women."

"I think this is a very original picture about the West," she said. "This man (Zandy) is certainly no hero--he's got all the stupidities and weaknesses. These two people have to adjust to each other. We have to adjust to a normal life in normal times; we never get any big dangers. It's like most people's experience."

The film does not fit the stereotype of a "western," since there are no gun fights, marauding Indians, and the other overworked elements associated with the genre.

Ms. Ullmann said she believes the Big Sur-Carmel area is "fantastically beautiful."

"Last week, in Carmel, it was grey. We came up to the mountain through the fog and it was sunny here."

She finds the filming routine in America more pressing than that in Europe.

"You really work here, until about 7 p.m.; then you go home at 8 p.m.; and have to be up at 6 a.m. the next day. It's very long hours, but this is a nice group to work with."

Although "Zandy's Bride" could be said to have elements of women's liberation in it, since Hannah must teach Zandy how to treat a woman, Ms. Ullmann is not overenthusiastic about the women's liberation movement.

"Women's lib is good as far as they should have the same money for the same work. But it can go too far if they try to take the man's place. They don't have to look like a man," she said.

"We live in an age of assassination and violence, people are attracted and repelled at the same time. Perhaps some uncivilized part of us requires that you go back to nature."

Filming of "Zandy's Bride," now in its third week in the Big Sur area, will continue for another six weeks.

IT DEALS with two archetypes familiar to the American experience: the pioneer spirit, restlessly seeking out new adventure and opportunities, and the European in-

LIV ULLMANN relaxes during filming of 'Zandy's Bride.'

DIRECTOR JAN TROELL (in white cap with hands folded) and a Warner Brothers film crew set up a scene from 'Zandy's Bride' on location in Big Sur. First assistant director Miles Middough puts a finishing touch on a fallen rancher played by Tito Vandis.

Ms. Ullmann believes film production has taken a new and healthy tack, away from the "spectacular" toward films which more accurately reflect real experience.

"A lot of money and a lot of people don't make good films. There's been a lot of wasted money in films in the past."

Gene Hackman, who won an Academy Award in 1971 as best actor for his portrayal of New York Detective Jimmy Doyle in "The French Connection," describes his role in "Zandy's Bride" as that of "a stubborn, mountain man--an egocentric man."

"It's about the relationship between two people and how they try to make things work, how he tries to dominate, and how he tries to overcome his male chauvinism," he said. "But she finally wins."

Hackman predicted there will "probably be a resurgence" in western movies, because "this is such a safe area." But he said he doesn't consider "Zandy's Bride" a typical western.

"I've done a lot of violent films, but I would like it if I could work as an actor without violence," he said. "But people are attracted to it. If it's done right, it can be exciting."

Hackman said he realizes motion pictures "have some effect on people's lives, but I hope they're not driven to violence by them.

"By the rating system, the younger people who would be more impressionable are kept out of the more violent films.

fluence, which is personified by Ms. Ullmann.

The Warner Brothers film is directed by Jan Troell, the young Swedish director who won critical acclaim for "The Immigrants" and "The New Land," both starring Liv Ullmann and Max von Sydow.

The producer is Harvey Matofsky, who also produced an unusual western in "The Last Tomorrow," which won the Critic's Prize at the Atlanta Film Festival.

The story is based on the 1942 novel "The Stranger," written by Lillian Bos Ross, who wrote the 90,000-word tale living in a house on the site of what is now the Esalen Institute in Big Sur.

Mrs. Ross died in 1963, but her widower, artist Harry Dick Ross, still lives in Big Sur.

Filming of the story, based on a screenplay by Marc Norman, is on a remote mountaintop adjacent to the Ventana area, which gives a commanding sweep of the countryside to the camera.

A visit to the site of filming makes it obvious that the production of movies, as much as any other craft, involves teamwork, professionalism, and no small amount of repetition to get the best from actors and working crew.

Nearly one hour was spent Tuesday morning, for example, filming one scene in which Hackman, as Alexander (Zandy) Allan, emerges from his log cabin, stretches, and walks to the water trough to wash after awakening.

'Zandy's Bride'

Ms. Ullmann enters from the right, carrying a pouch of water, and asks if he had been at the creek, since she had noted footprints there. There is no dialogue, but Zandy races off screen after she enters the cabin, possibly fearing a bear is in the area.

The shooting went through two rehearsals, including delays for overhead airplanes, and two shootings. The first shooting had to be scrapped because the sound man detected someone on the sidelines whispering.

"No whispering!" was the command from Troell, concealed behind a wooden barn which doubles as a storage area for props and equipment, asked:

"Is she on-screen?"

"No," said Ms. Ullmann, glancing at her position camera-right.

"No, I mean the mule--I want her in the scene."

The entire crew, actors and actresses, was convulsed with laughter.

She also starred a few months later in Ross Hunter's musical version of "Lost Horizon," with Peter Finch and an international cast. She is soon to be seen in Mike Frankovich's film version of the Broadway hit "Forty Carats."

She was born of Norwegian parents in Tokyo. Her father, a civil engineer, took his wife and infant daughter to Canada when World War II broke out. The family moved to New York when he became ill, and, after the father's death, the mother took Liv and her younger sister back to the family home in Trondhagen, Norway. Ms. Ullmann left school at 17 to study drama in London, and made her stage debut in the Stravanger theatre in Norway in the title role of "The Diary of Anne Frank."

Gene Hackman has had two previous Academy Award nominations in his brief film career--the first for his performance as Buck Barrow, the brother of Clyde in "Bonnie and Clyde," and in 1970 for the role of the estranged son in "I Never Sang for My Father."

SCREENWRITER Marc Norman says "Zandy's Bride is "the story of a marriage," and "the love story of Zandy (Hackman) and Hannah (Ullmann) could happen anywhere, anytime -- in a log cabin in Big Sur in the 1870's or in a stucco house in New Jersey today."

Hannah Lund advertises in the newspaper for a husband and a new life in America, and Zandy answers the ad and pays her passage to Big Sur. Conflict arises since Zandy, who has only known one way to treat a woman--the same violent way in which he has seen his father (Frank Cady) treat his mother (Eileen Heckart)-- wants a son, while Hannah seeks a home and roots.

The story traces the pair through a violent wedding night through a year of marriage in the evolution of a new relationship.

There are the usual marital problems--sex, money, the clothes Hannah should wear, the messiness of the cabin, and a clothesline she wants to put up.

Hannah is jealous of Zandy's former girl friend Maria (played by Susan Tyrrell), and Zandy gets irked when Avery (played by Alf Kjellin) gets along well with Hannah.

Ms. Ullmann was nominated for an Academy Award for her starring role as a pioneer woman in "The Emigrants," and she won her third New York Critics' award for Bergman's "Cries and Whispers."

JAN TROELL directs Gene Hackman on location in Big Sur for a scene in Warner Brothers 'Zandy's Bride.' Hackman stars opposite Liv Ullmann in the western love story, a Harvey Matofsky production. Observing in background is first assistant director Miles Middough.

Supervisors ponder consumer office

A proposal to establish an office of consumer affairs within the Monterey County Department of Weights and Measures will be considered by the Board of Supervisors at a public hearing set for 1:30 p.m. May 15.

The propsal has the backing of numerous groups throughout the county, including the League of Women Voters of the Monterey Peninsula, the American Association of University Women and the Salinas League of Women Voters.

The office would respond to complaints from consumers or businessmen and attempt to mediate minor disputes. It would also provide consumer education programs and disseminate general consumer informatin throughout the county.

June Hutchinson of Country Club Drive, Carmel Valley, is heading the local drive for support for a consumer office. For additional information she may be reached at 659-3270.

Unusual homes and gardens on Volunteer Services tour

Owners of selected Carmel, Pebble Beach, and Monterey mini-mansions are taking a final scrutinizing look at their home and garden before the public does.

The 20th Annual House and Garden Tour, which is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services, will take place from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on May 9.

Besides giving curious spectators a chance to get an inside look at these beautiful homes, the proceeds from the tour will go to a good cause. The Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services, Inc. is a non-profit volunteer organization whose primary purpose is to give financial assistance to other non-profit groups concerned with social services and cultural improvement. M.P.V.S. members serve as liaison officers on the boards of some 13 local agencies to determine various needs of the community.

During 1972 about $33,000 was donated to the Lyceum, Visiting Nurses Association, Family Service Agency, and many others. The proceeds of this year's Garden Tour will go to the Visiting Nurses Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ritenour of Carmel have been sprucing up their home and garden for the big day. Camellias line the driveway in the front of their beautiful home. The newly decorated interior has a light and airy feeling with Oriental "objects d'art" adding elegance to the classic decor.

The living room opens onto a large brick terrace which has a far-reaching view of the hills of Carmel Valley. The secluded patio is surrounded by perennials, shrubs, and trees. Marion Eleyu of Carmel will be the hostess at the Ritenour home.

The quiet, secluded garden of Dr. and Mrs. John D'Attilio of Carmel will also be featured on the tour. A tall clipped hedge forms a semi-circular driveway which shields the large home completely from the street.

The spectators will be led through the children's playground to a garden of colorful fuchsias and towering trees. A terrace off the family room overlooks this spectacular garden.

"HELLelujah" is the name of the Pebble Beach ranch-style home of the Ellies. The entrance to their home is through massive double doors hand-carved by Mr. Zeller of San Juan Bautista. To the right of the entrance is a magnificent stained glass window; to the left is an authentic Amish baby carriage; and above, the angel Gabriel.

That's just the entry hall. In the living room you'll find a carving of the Madonna and a lifelike statue of St. Francis. The carousel horse at the poolside is of German origin; atop the fireplace mantel there's a Dutch rooster and a French pig. The hostess, Mrs. Thomas Hardy of Carmel, will point out the antique Tiffany lampshade, the rosewood violin case, and other heirloom and antique objects of art.

The architectural style of this home is well suited to its location for hillside planting and the retention of native trees and juniper. There is a spectacular view of Carmel Bay and Big Sur.

The entrance to the Robert McMahan house is through handsome double doors to a large foyer which has a view of Carmel Bay, and beyond that, Point Lobos. The circular staircase descends to the lower terrace and garden which is planted with fuschia and Lily of the Nile.

Japanese touches such as stone lanterns, oriental statues, and bonsai plants are scattered about the garden. This garden has cyclamen, azaleas, and rhododendrons. As you return to the front of the house under a stone bridge, notice the extensive use of chalk rock in retaining walls and the driveway. Mrs. Howard Healy of Pebble Beach will be the hostess.

Although Professor and Mrs. Chang Dai-Chien have only lived in their Pebble Beach home for about 18 months, they have created an Oriental paradise. Enormous boulders and pieces of driftwood at the front of the house set the theme. Enclosing a rolling area of lawn are azaleas, rhododendrons, camellias, flowering fruit trees, and towering pines. An oriental-style garden wouldn't be complete without a little pond with stepping stones. A highlight will be a peek at artist Dai-Chien's studio and gallery. Dai-Chien is one of the leading traditional Chinese painters of today.

The Willoughby Nason home, which was built in 1922, is a copy of a Venetian mansion. In the early days, horse-drawn carriages passed through the oversized double doors, across the tiled foyer, to the flagstone courtyard. The high-beamed ceilings and tile floors are typical of the architectural style of the period. The floor tiles were hand-made by a Carmel craftsman.

The hillside garden of primroses and shrubs offers a view of Carmel Bay. The hostess, Mrs. Russell White of Monterey, will point out the Chinese dog planter and an elegant tiled table on the patio. Scrolled wrought iron gates lead to the lower terraces. Near the corner of the house is a small pond lined with rare blue tile surrounded by lush greenery.

Although the John Phillips' home is one of the more contemporary, it is very much in touch with its forest surroundings. The ferns and trees have been carefully preserved and can be seen from every room.

The use of natural wood and tile in the interior seems to bring the native environment inside. Upstairs, a balcony completely surrounds the house and offers a spectacular view of the forest from every side. One side overlooks a deer path, and in the spring a doe often appears with her fawn.

In Monterey, spectators will visit the house and garden of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Leach, and the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Flagg.

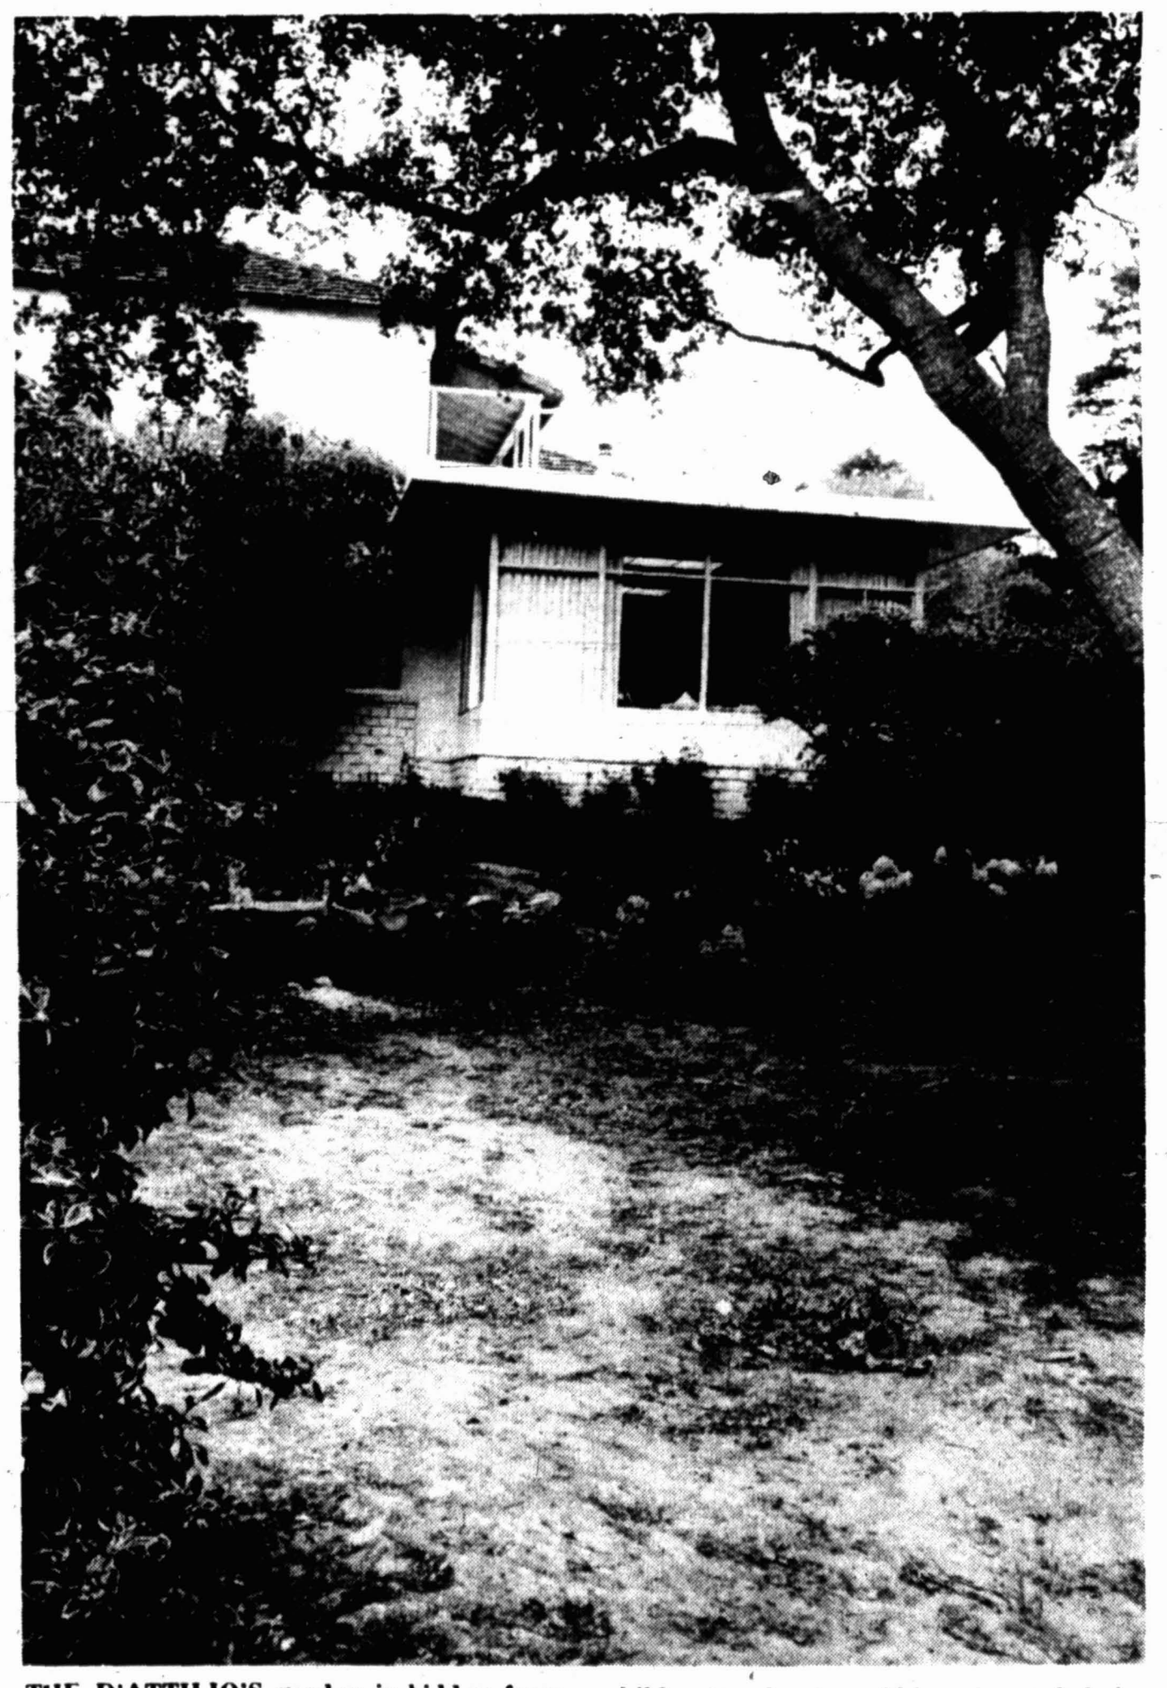
The Flagg's two-story Georgian-style mansion is in the midst of formal gardens surrounded by a lush forest area. The free-form swimming pool is surrounded by huge boulders of Carmel stone arranged by Richard Murray.

The rambling California-style Leach home is hidden from the road by a group of oak trees and a weeping willow. Inside the house there is a view across the golf course and Monterey Bay to the Santa Cruz mountains in the distance.

After the tour, Mrs. John Anderson and Mrs. Harry Gillett will be serving tea at the Carmel Mission Basilica.

The tour begins at 10 a.m. and ends at 4 p.m. The tea begins at 2 p.m. and lasts until 5 p.m. Tickets may be purchased by calling Mrs. R. Haviland, 624-8149 or Mrs. R. White, 375-5604, or write to P.O. Box 2004, Carmel.

THE ELLIES' Pebble Beach home is the antique collector's dream. In their house you will find an old Tiffany lampshade, a rosewood violin case, and other heirloom and antique objects of art.



THE D'ATTILIO'S garden is hidden from busy Carmel by a tall clipped hedge. The children's playground is surrounded by colorful fuchsias and towering trees.

Party Plans:

Dining as the Romans do

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

ON FRIDAY evening at 8:15, May 4, there will be a special showing of the Explorama's film produced and narrated in person by Gene Wiancko. Historically and artistically, Rome is one of the great cities of the world. This exciting and colorful new film examines the timeless wonder of Rome and the delightful, volatile Italians. Also featured are the charming cities and splendid scenery of northern Italy. Lake Como, medieval hill towns of Tuscany, Venice and Florence. This extra treat takes place as usual at Carmel's Sunset Cultural Center, 8th and San Carlos.

It is better to get into the right mood by preparing an Italian meal such as the one Nelo Drizari, Carmel author and artist, told us about. When in Rome, Nelo always dines at Alfredo's, the internationally famous Roman restaurant. Alfredo Sr. prepared his famous fettucini himself and gave the recipe to me for presentation in Party Plans.

Fettucini Alfredo: Two eggs, well beaten; one to one and one-half cups sifted flour, two tsp. salt; three cups boiling water; one cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese; three-quarters cup melted butter. First add salt to beaten eggs. Gradually stir in flour with boiling water to make a stiff dough. Turn out on floured board. Knead until dough is elastic, adding more flour as needed. Cover with a towel and let rest 15 minutes. Cut dough into two. Carefully roll out as thinly as possible on floured board. Sprinkle these fettucini sheets with cool water. Let dry until a deep golden color. Cut into long strips eight inches by one-eighth of an inch in width. Drop into boiling salted water. Cook no longer than eight minutes, until tender but firm ... never soft. Drain well. Place on large heated platter. Add cheese and butter, tossing lightly with fork and spoon. Serve immediately or keep hot on electric table warmer. Pass extra cheese.

Also, right in our midst is Carmel's Mediterranean Market where any unusual item is available.

Wickedly strong is Cappuccino Caffe. It's nutmeg color is reminiscent of the robes of Capuchin monks. Pour equal parts of hot milk and espresso coffee simultaneously into dinner-sized cups. Muddle with a cinnamon stick and top with fresly grated nutmeg. This may also be made with hot chocolate or cocoa, adding sugar, anisette, rum and a twist of lemon as desired.

BUT THE EASIEST on the hostess, if not her pocketbook, is to go to Raffaello's Carmel Restaurant, Mission and Ocean for a magnificent Italian meal. Owned and managed by Remo d'Agliano (who tells us that the cuisine of his native Tuscany had its beginning in 600 B.C.), it has wonderful cooperation from his mother Amelia. It is she who makes her own fettucini daily and supervises the kitchen. Raffaello's specializes in the best of the wine-and-olive oil, milk-and-butter-with Parmesan technique to create a mosaic of Tuscan-French dishes.

Tuscany produced the Florentine chefs who laid the foundation for France's peerless haute cuisine. These were the cooks that Catherine di Medici took to the French court when she married Henry II in 1533. This canny connoisseuse also introduced artichokes to her adopted country. How about Scampi alla Griglia (Grilled Prawns); Risotto Milano (Milanese Saffron Rice); Carciofi alla Milanese (Artichokes Milanese).

Grilled Prawns: two lbs. large fresh or frozen prawns; two tbsps., each, olive oil and butter; dash of salt, pinch of garlic powder; three tbsps. lemon juice; shredded parsley; lemon wedges for garnish.

Cut prawns with scissors lengthwise, leaving shells attached just above tails. Clean out sand veins. Heat oil, butter, seasonings. Put all in shallow Pyrex baking dish, cut-side up. Brush with seasoned-oil-butter. Grill until lightly browned. Turn prawns shell side up. Brush with remaining butter. Grill four minutes. Sprinkle with lemon juice. Garnish. Serves six.

Rissoto Milano: Two cups regular white rice; two cups chicken broth; one-half cup chopped onion; two sticks butter; four cups hot water; salt to taste, powdered or threaded saffron; two cups freshly grated Parmesan cheese.

Cook rice in broth in covered skillet over low flame until dry. Brown onion lightly in butter. Add cooked rice, pour in hot water with salt and butter. Dissolve saffron in small amount of warm broth to color rice a lovely yellow. Sprinkle cheese over top. Serve on platter surrounded by grilled tomato halves dusted with dill. Frozen, thawed artichoke hearts seasoned with sweet basil, oregano, garlic powder, sauteed in butter with sliced fresh mushrooms and baked are a delightful accompaniment. Serves eight.

Miss Armstrong is a graduate of the Traphagen School of Fashion in New York, and is presently employed by the Hecht Co., Washington, D.C.

Calvert will graduate from the Virginia Institute of Technology and State University, Blacksburg, Va., and will be commissoned a 2nd lieutenant in the Air Force. He is a member of Phi Sigma Kappa social fraternity.

A wedding is being planned for late summer in Blacksburg.

Salli, not Falli

Carmel Life proved to be fallible last week when we made mention of Salli Holbrook Painter's first child – Hassell Eric Painter, born April 20 at Community Hospital.

The mother is Salli, not Falli, as we erroneously stated.

Camp Amigos applications ready

Applications for Camp Amigos are now available in the offices of elementary schools in Carmel and Carmel Valley.

The interracial camp, which draws children from throughout the Monterey Peninsula, will open its sixth season on July 9 on the grounds of the All Saints Episcopal Day School in mid-Carmel Valley.

Camp Amigos will have two one-week day camp sessions for children seven to nine years old: July 9 to 13, and July 16 to 20.

There will also be two one-week camps at Big Sur for children who are 10 to 12 years old. These will be held the weeks starting July 30 and Aug. 6.

The fee for the day camp is $1 per child, and $2 for the Big Sur week. This covers the cost of all food, supplies, admission to the Carmel Valley Community Center pool, bus transportation to the day camp for children living in Monterey and Seaside.

Camp Amigos has kept the same minimum fee schedule since it was established, to make sure that all children attend on an equal basis, regardless of economic background.

Fees paid by campers are supplemented by contributions from numerous churches and civic groups on the Monterey Peninsula, and by donations from parents who wish to give more than the basic fee.

Camp directors this summer will be Bob and Lynn Brooks of Carmel. Brooks is a physical education and industrial arts instructor at Carmel High School. He is presently coaching the track team and has served as an assistant football coach for the Padres.

He has a masters degree in physical education. Both Brooks and his wife have had considerable experience working with children.

Mrs. Ken White of Carmel is president of Camp Amigos,and Leon Panetta of Carmel Valley is vice president.

Other officers are: Mrs. Glen Stoops, treasurer; Mrs. J.L. Williams, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Peter Dyer, secretary; Mrs David Schrady, coordinator; Mrs. Theodore Calhoon, assistant co-ordinator; George Schroeder and Dr. Rolf Johnson, fund raisers.

A medical clearance is required for all campers. A free medical clinic will be held Saturday, June 9, from 9 a.m. to noon at Highlands School on Sonoma Ave. in Seaside.

DAR makes good citizenship awards

Richard Lyon of Junipero Serra School, Dan Sturges of Carmel Middle School, and Kevin Burke of Robert Louis Stevenson School were among nine winners on the Monterey Peninsula of the Daughters of the American Revolution Good Citizenship Award.

This award is presented for the fulfillment of the qualities of honor, service, courage, leadership and patriotism.

American History Month Essay Contest Certificates of Appreciation were awarded to Kevin T. Burke and Tim Kinion of the Robert Louis Stevenson School for their essays on "A Patriot of 1773."

The contest is sponsored each year by the National Society, DAR for the purpose of stimulating interest in American History. These young men were among 14 Monterey Peninsula students in the fifth through eighth grades who were recipients of this award given by the Commodore Sloat Chapter. Tea Chairman was Mrs. Oliver E. Wood, Chapter regent.

Marine lab open house

The Department of Fish and Game's Marine Culture Laboratory, located at Granite Canyon on Highway 1 nine miles south of Carmel, will hold an open house from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

The public is invited to learn about progress being made in propagation of abalones, clams, crabs and other marine organisms.

Senior marine biologist Earl Ebert and other members of the DFG's Marine Resources Region will be on hand to explain the work conducted at the lab.

The marine resources research facility was established in 1970 by the Department of Fish and Game under provisions of the Federal Bartlett Commercial Fisheries Research and Development Act.

Moody on dean's list

Midshipman John F. Moody, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Moody of Carmel, has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester, academic year 1972-73, at the U.S. Naval Academy. The dean's list honors midshipmen with a minimum semester grade average of 3.4 on a 4.0 system. He is a 1971 graduate of Carmel High School.

Artists hold discussion

The four artists comprising the "Alternative Directions" group, Anne Boone, Virginia Gonzalez, Barbara Greenberg, and Bebe Greenberg, held their first discussion meeting last Sunday evening in their new quarters in Sunset Center.

Prominent artists of the area, Louise Boyer, Sophie Harpe, Peter Pilat, Dick Crispo, and Jean Willsdon, participated in the discussion. Other invited guests were Irene Lagorio, Gilbert Boyer, Howard Boone, Dr. Saul Greenberg, and Dr. Irving W. Greenberg. Some of the artists brought samples of their work.

The symposium discussed the influence of the art groups on the community and on each other; and the need for a place to exhibit the type of work that does not fall into the category of "gallery paintings."

A collation stimulated the exchange of ideas.

'Creative Needle' exhibit

The Monterey County Symphony Guild's "Creative Needle Exhibit" May 10 and 11 will be a family affair. This display of contemporary needle art includes works by all members of the family, of all ages.

The show will be divided into different sections, including a category for children, mothers, grandmothers, and men and their wives. There will also be a display of needlework Christmas ornaments.

The exhibit is the first public showing of rare pieces from privately owned collections from the homes of the Monterey Peninsula. There will also be the work of designers such as Elsa Williams.

The coordinator is Mrs. Howard P. Hunter; the exhibitors are Mrs. Nelson Nowell and Mrs. William Timmins; in charge of display are Mrs. Sabastian Bordonaro and Mrs. Hartley C. Dewey.

Admission for the show is $2 and tickets are available at Sunset Center, Room 8, Carmel. Tickets may also be purchased at the exhibit, which will be at the Carmel Woman's Club, San Carlos and Ninth in Carmel. The show on May 10 will be from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. and on May 11, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. artists

Antiques expand

Carmel may soon become known, not only for its art galleries, cypress trees, and high prices, but also for it's wide selection of antique shops.

In the last couple of years, the antique store section of the Yellow Pages has more than doubles. Luciano Antiques in Carmel is keeping up with the growing trend. Luciano has just completed the upstairs to give their shop 11 new showrooms for displaying antiques from different periods and countries.

Luciano also recently leased large warehouses in other areas of the peninsula to facilitate handling shipments direct from Europe. These shipments arrive twice a month.

These new facilities and expanded showrooms of over 25,000 square feet cater to individuals, architects, and interior designers locally.

'There is no Iron Curtain'

Bulgarian doctor is Pine Inn bus boy

By ROBERT MISKIMON

ATANAS ATANASOV is probably one of the few bus boys in the world qualified to perform orthopedic surgery and to give lessons in Bulgarian.

In fact, he's the only medical doctor ever to work as a bus boy at the Pine Inn.

He started working there in October to sustain himself, his wife Filka, and his two children, Miroslav, a three-year-old son, and Maria Slava, a 10-month-old daughter, while he studies to prepare himself for an examination in July.

If he passes the exam, he will then be eligible for a hospital residency or internship, which will be the first step toward the practice of medicine in the United States.

After that, he figures he has from two to three years ahead of him before he can again practice his profession.

But he's been submitting himself to a Spartan routine of work and study which he is confident will pay off when he takes the exam administered by the Educational Council for Foreign Medical Graduates.

Half of the test is on medicine; the other half is to measure command of the English language.

Although he still speaks falteringly at times, and occasionally must resort to a Bulgarian-English dictionary in conversation, the 38-year-old physician-bus boy's eyes are filled with determination.

It was the kind of determination needed to launch his family on a journey from his native country to the United States last year.

He was born in Kazanluk, Bulgaria, the center of the Rose Valley, where "the largest quantity of roses" is raised in Eastern Europe for the production of rose perfumes. He is the only son of a retired book-keeper.

"There are no political or professional reasons why I left -- just private reasons," Atanasov says.

Before leaving Bulgaria, Atanasov was head of the orthopedics department at a government rehabilitation center at Pavel Banya, Bulgaria, which specialized in the treatment of muscle and bone diseases, and rehabilitation of muscle tissue after trauma.

The Atanasovs picked the Monterey Peninsula as their stop because his wife has relatives in Monterey. Their daughter, Maria Slava, was born in Carmel Community Hospital three months later.

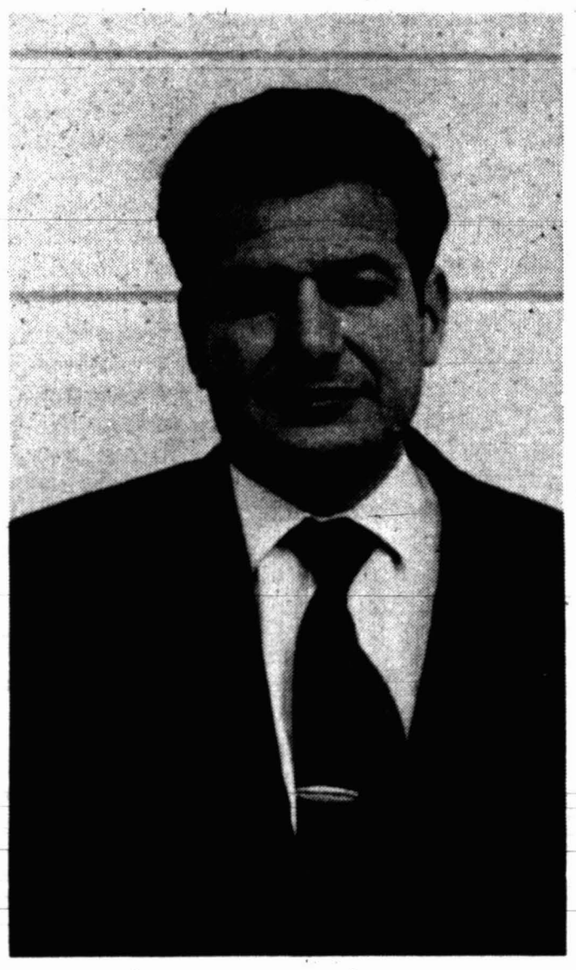
His first job was as a biological technician at Hopkins Marine Laboratory in Pacific Grove on a project which studied microbiological life on the bottom of the sea. This was a temporary job, and was followed by a stint as assistant to the veterinarian at the Peninsula Animal Hospital in Pacific Grove.

Atanasov began working as a bus boy at the Pine Inn while still employed at the veterinary hospital, but, after four months of holding down two jobs, had to quit the veterinary hospital because "it was too much for me."

NOW, HE DEVOTES most of the day to study and his family, and works at night.

"After I pass the exam, I'll be eligible to start practice as a resident because of my $11\frac{1}{2}$ years of practice before," he explains. If he can not locate a residency, he may look for an internship.

"I specialized in general surgery, but I don't want to change my practice and profession," he says. "I prefer to begin as a resident, and then, after that, I'll be eliglble to work as a specialist in surgery."



ATANAS ATANASOV

Atanasov has a number of notions about the communist and democratic nations which some Americans might find disconcerting.

"After Stalin's death, there is no Iron Curtain," he says. "To visit Bulgaria is easier than to visit the United States. You may visit my country without a visa -- with only a regular passport from the country where you live.

"The rulers in my country are communist, but I'm not a communist," he says.

Atanasov was 9 years old, and his wife was 6 years old when the communists took power, but he believes "things have changed in a positive manner" since then, and "life is 100 times better.

"Before the communists, my country was agricultural, and one of the poorest in Europe -- Poor in the economic sense of the word. More than 90 percent of the population was peasants living on small pieces of land.

"Now, more than 50 percent of the state's income is from industry. The standard of living was going up during all these years, and now is in a very good condition."

Atanasov is somewhat puzzled by the furor over rising food costs in the United States, since the residents of Bulgaria traditionally have spent a much larger share of their income, proportionally, for food, than Americans.

"The standard of life here in the United States is the highest of all the world; here, the rents are the highest, too. But the prices for food are the lowest, compared to European countries, where food prices take more of their salaries."

Every American wants to ask Atanasov about the question of individual liberties under communist rule.

"Constitutionally, these rights are granted to everybody - freedom and the right to your own type of thinking," he says.

"But there is a special point in our constitution that says because the power comes from the people in socialist Bulgaria, and because the government is the people's government, nobody can speak or write anti-government propaganda."

ADMITTEDLY, Atanasov says, Americans find it difficult to accept or believe that the Bulgarians feel they are better off under the existing form of government than before the communists took power.

"The people in my country see that the communists are leading the people to a better life; they feel every year more and more income."

Atanasov says he doesn't know if he will return to Bulgaria, but he doesn't rule it out completely.

He recalls that some of his earliest impressions of the United States were formed when, as a child, he read American literature. One of his favorite writers is Jack London.

"I like especially his stories about the north and these strong people who struggle against ice and wolves, who will reach what they will find -- this is primitive power, but it is the power of America," he says.

"I have many reasons to like many sides of American life. Carmel is one of the most beautiful places in the world and was originally constructed with architectural genius and with a deep concern with nature.

"The houses are hidden in the trees and they're built to not destroy nature's beauty. This upholds the traditions of the first artists who came here. This must continue in the future if people want to keep it in this beautiful condition."

Some of the things which Atanasov likes most about America are the freeways, the assortment of goods available to the consumer, and the shopping centers.

"You can find all you want here -- even bird's milk!" he exclaims, using an expression common in Bulgarian.

"The assortment and packaging of goods here is on the highest level I have ever seen. And American highways are perfect. This road system gives to everybody the possibility for the best connections all over the country."

But Atanasov is concerned about what he believes is an inadequacy in the American system of health care delivery.

"Medicine must be socialized, like in most European countries, including Germany and England," he says.

"In my country, medical care is given without any payment for everybody. You go to a hospital, or go to the doctor you prefer, or he comes to your house, without any payment. You never pay a dollar for this treatment.

"And, if you are a working man, your position will be kept for you and you get from 80 to 90 percent of your salary while disabled.

"The salaries are not so high, but they are enough for everybody to live well and wear very good clothes."

Atanasov has a high opinion of American physicians and medical care.

"Here you have enough hospitals and good physicians. They're capable of giving people all the help they need. They help thousands and thousands of people, and they like their profession."

Socialized medicine such as that practiced in England and other western European nations -- not like that practiced in Bulgaria and other communist nations -- should be instituted in the United States, Atanasov feels, because, too often, the cost of medical care stands between the patient and physician.

NATIVE PLANT SOCIETY

The Monterey Bay Chapter of the California Native Plant Society will meet May 15 at 8 p.m. in Room 10 of Sunset Center, Carmel.

Professor William Libby, University of California Berkeley, will discuss the domestication of Monterey pine -- which he often refers to as "super-pine". Libby has studied the remnants of all native stands in California and the Mexican islands, and he has worked in the intensively cultivated Monterey pine plantations in New Zealand and Australia.

His talk will include information about why Carmel Valley nurseries might sell Monterey pines from Australian seed, how the goats on Guadalupe Island may play a critical role in developing cold resistance in Monterey pine seedlings, and how dairy cows in New Zealand may affect the price of plywood in Japan.

AUDUBON FIELD TRIP

This Saturday, the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society will hold a field trip at Hastings Natural History Reservation to see breeding birds of the region.

Meet at Reservation headquarters at 9 a.m.

The Hastings Road is at the left, off the Carmel Valley-Greenfield Road, 14.5 miles beyond Carmel Valley Village. Bring a lunch as you wish. The leader will be Dr. John Davis, the director of the Reservation.

YOUNG LIFE RUMMAGE

The 4th Annual Young Life Rummage Sale will be held this weekend at St. Angela's Church at the corner of 8th and Central in Pacific Grove.

Young Life is an interdenominational Christian organization which has been working in the Monterey area for the last five years. Carmel's Young Life Club meets regularly under the leadership of Bob Broyles, area director.

Mrs. Joe DeCosta of Pebble Beach is chairperson of the rummage sale again this year. A special feature will be the refreshment bar and bake sale, both staffed by women from the Pacific Grove Methodist Church Young Life Circle.

The proceeds from the bake sale will be used to send local teen-agers to one of the Young Life summer camps. The hours of the sale are from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday; and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

ALLIANCE FRANCAISE

The Alliance Francaise will hold its annual bazaar to benefit its French language scholarship at the La Playa Hotel May 5.

This event is open to the public with door prizes, a sandwich and pastry booth, coffee, and gourmet foods. There will also be plants, objects d'art, costume jewelry, next-to-new chic dresses, lingerie, handbags, and fine books.

Come early and stay late (10 a.m. to 3 p.m.) at the hotel's conference hall where the bazaar will take place. Telephone Mrs. Jervey, 624-2003, for any further information. Donations are welcome.

GEM AND MINERAL SOCIETY

The Carmel Valley Gem and Mineral Society will hold its regular monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 11 at the Carpenters' Hall in Monterey.

Audrey Benschoter will give a presentation on agate carving. She will demonstrate the cutting and polishing of hard materials using the tools designed and built by her husband.

Visitors are welcome to attend.

CARMEL MISSION BASILICA ALTAR SOCIETY

The May meeting of the Carmel Mission Basilica Altar Society will take place at 2 p.m. on May 10 in Crespi Hall.

Father Richard O'Halloran, assistant at San Carlos Cathedral in Monterey, will tell of his experiences through the Far East, Thailand and as an observer at the Eucharistic Congress at Melbourne, Australia.

Tea and a social hour will follow. Hostesses for the day will be Mrs. M. McCarthy Gless, Mrs. John Frier, Mrs. John Doud and Miss Grace Randlett.

The annual luncheon meeting of the society will be June 14 at the Hotel La Playa. Reservations are now being accepted by Mrs. Frank Sieve at 624-8121.

PLANT SHOW AND SALE

On May 3 and 4, the Men's Garden Club of the Monterey Peninsula will hold a plant show and sale in the Estrada Adobe Patio behind the Monterey Savings and Loan Association office in Monterey (adjacent to the merchants' parking lot off Tyler Street).

The hours will be from 10 a.m. on both days to 4 p.m. on Thursday and 5 p.m. on Friday.

To fill your summer garden with color and to replace plants killed in last December's "deep freeze," many annual and perennial bedding plants and various succulents will be available for sale.

The club also has a good stock of fuchsias, hydrangeas, calceolaria, zonal and trailing geraniums, Eucalyptus ficifolia and several rarer eucalyptus varieties, bottle brush and manzanita tomentosa, various evergreens, miniature roses, everbearing strawberries (already in fruit) and cherry tomatoes for sale.

Also to be offered are several species of summer bulbs and tubers, gladioli, ginger lilies, cannas, clivia, and cactus dahlias. For the shade garden, there will be several varieties of ferns, 2-year-old tuberous begonia plants, fibrous-rooted and cane begonias, and various impatiens sultani.

Of special interest are a four-foot English holly in container, three Arizona cypresses in 10-gallon containers, and driftwood containers planted with ornamental grasses and small plants.

NATHANIEL OWINGS RECEPTION

Architect Nathaniel Owings of Big Sur will be the guest of honor at a reception Sunday from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Thunderbird Bookshop in Carmel Valley. The reception will mark the publication of his book, "The Spaces In Between."

Sandra Tucker engaged

The engagement of Sandra Lynn Tucker of Monterey to Dr. Russell M. Pratt of Monterey has been announced.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Mrs. Jan Maley of Indianapolis and the late Roy Maley. Her brother is Dennis P. Maley, also of Indianapolis.

The groom's parents are Mr. Roy Pratt of Pacific Grove and the later Janette Pratt.

The wedding ceremony will be May 5 at the Highlands Inn, and will be performed by Judge Ralph M. Drummond.

The bride will wear an ivory chiffon over satin dress, capped with lace at the bodice and trimmed with seed pearls. Her bouquet will consist of orange tropicana roses, white carnations, and baby's breath. She will wear a single tropicana rose in her hair.

Corinne M.A. Crone of Monterey and Holland will be maid of honor. The best man will be Dr. Blaney B. Blodgett.

Rather than having the usual bride and groom ornamentation, the wedding cake will be topped with a pair of blown glass owls perched on a glass branch. The glass sculpture is the creation of John Calder of Carmel.

After the ceremony, the couple will leave for a two week honeymoon trip to Palm Springs, Southern California and Disneyland.

GOLF CAPITOL TRANSFER & STORAGE

We could have called ourselves Monolithic Moving, Tornado Transfer, Vulture Van or the like, but we thought GOLF CAPITOL Transfer and Storage sounded a lot more informal and relaxing, not to mention Homey (we even spelled Capitol that way so you wouldn't think of Money).

On the subject of money, we're running a little special on Storage from now until next June 15th. Our Palletized 310 cu. ft. containers are offered to individuals and businesses alike for $8.75 per month each. Warehouse handling in and out is just 1½ times the first month's storage charge. We also pick up and deliver at competitive rates.

GOLF CAPITOL can give you the very best in quality Local, State or Nationawide Moving; we're 48 State agent for fifty year old BURNHAM VAN SERVICE. Be assured our men are well equipped and highly experienced professionals, in addition to being pretty nice guys.

So, if your requirements are for one storage container or to ship 30,000 pounds to Key West, Florida, we're ready to serve you. 394-2964 567 ORTIZ SAND CITY

City commended for dumping order compliance

The city of Carmel was commended by the California Regional Water Quality Control Board after a board representative inspected, on April 18, the city's former fill site on property adjoining the north bank of the Carmel River.

In a letter to the city, Kenneth Jones, executive officer of the board, wrote: "We wish to thank you for your prompt compliance to our cleanup or abatement order and recognize you cannot be held responsible for parties, other than city employees, who have or may dump waste materials on the adjacent Hodges property (the city had been using the Dienelt property next to the Hodges property as a fill site). We appreciate Mr. (William - city superintendent of public works) Askew's promise to continue watering the plantings made to stabilize the slopes at the site.

"Your continued interest in the quality of water in the Central Coast Region is appreciated and we look forward to working with you in the future regarding your proposed new disposal site," the letter concluded.

The board issued a cease and desist order at the end of March, but, according to City Administrator Hugh Bayless, the city had stopped use of the site at least two weeks prior to the order.

"We knew the order was coming, and we had complied with the order before we got it," he said early in April.

The city's use of the land on the bank of the Carmel River for a disposal site generated opposition from Dan J. Daley of Carmel, who voiced his protest in a letter to the county board of supervisors last February.

Bayless explained that the site was used by the city since 1971, following an agreement reached in 1969 between former Mayor Barney Laiolo, Askew and the late Lynn Hodges over use of Hodges' property to permit access by the city through his property for depositing fill on the adjacent property.

"When we received the cease and desist order," Bayless told the Pine Cone last week, "we immediately ceased and desisted and as soon as they (the board) told us what they wanted, we immediately complied and planted ice plant to stabilize the fill."

"We are now relieved of any future responsibility for the site," Bayless commented.

He added that the public works department will go "back and water the ice plant -- if it doesn't rain anymore -- to make sure it takes root."

According to Bayless, the city is now considering use of a portion of the 17½-acre piece of land which it owns, located across Rio Road from the Carmel Mission, for a fill site. This is a portion of the Doolittle-Flanders property, "at the north end, way back in the trees," Bayless said. Asked how the city trucks would reach the potential fill site, Bayless explained that "they would build a road off the end of Eleventh Street, which people don't really realize goes in there. Eleventh angles off Junipero, and there would be some extension of that existing road."

Use of the far north end of the property as a fill site would not hamper use of the property as a park, Bayless explained, and the access road constructed to the fill site would not be near the proposed entrance to the "walk-in park."

In the interim, waste material is being transported to the Marina disposal site.

Camera club to meet

The Padre Trails Camera Club will hold its regularly scheduled meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 8, opening with a business meeting for discussion. Following this, there will be a club pictorial competition in which each member may enter four slides for judging.

The featured program will be a showing of slides on Japan by Ray Rinehart of Pacific Grove.

Visitors interested in color photography are welcome at the meetings and membership in Padre Trails Camera Club is open to any who wish to promote their photographic interest by participation in the club program.

The meeting on May 8 will be held at the Northern California Savings and Loan building, Dolores and Seventh, in Carmel.

Trying the Tamaaraa in Tahiti

"Gwen has taken dancing all her life, but when she tried to learn the Tamaaraa there were a few movements she just couldn't get!" Al Wilmot kidded his wife Gwen about their vacation in Tahiti last summer.

The Wilmots stayed at the Club Mediterrane on the Island of Moorea, French Polynesia. The Tamaaraa was just one activity they tried during their two week stay.

"We had so many sports activities available to us," Gwen said. "We went snorkeling in the clear blue waters of the South Pacific, water skiing within the calm, volcano-formed lagoons around the island, bicycling around the island of Bora-Bora (that took three and one-half hours to get all the way around and boy were we sore!); sailing one of the Club Med's own sail boats to the tiny island of Matu Tabu for a picnic, deep sea fishing from fishing boats (we later had the Mahi-Mahi caught on our trip for lunch!) and back at Club Med we often played ping pong or petanque (a French game similar to the Italian's Bocci Ball.')"

The visitors to Club Med (or the G.M.s, meaning Genteel Members) were mainly from France or the United States. During their stay last July the Wilmots were lucky to participate in two big celebrations -- the 4th of July and Bastille Day. The G.O.s (Genteel Organizers as the staff was called) organized day-long activities for both celebrations. July 4th was complete with parade, sports contests, turkey feast, fireworks and dance.

For the Bastille Day celebration, the G.O.s (being mostly French or Tahitian themselves) almost outdid themselves with a mock procession to the gallows, a gymkhana, water ski show, gourmet French food (the French Chefs at Club Med spent days preparing for the Bastille Day feast!), more fireworks, demonstration of continental French dances, and party which lasted way into the night.

Al and Gwen participated in a bicycle race which was part of the Bastille Day celebration. First Gwen, then Al raced with the bicycle down on the beach, up to the pathway, stopped to dunk for a lemon, then, with wet faces, searched through a plate of flour for a bead, then went back to bicycles and through such obstacles as mud puddles, see-saws, sand traps and more.

"Besides the many sports activities and classes available there were lagoon trips in glass bottom boats, shelling, sightseeing and shopping tours, a library with recorded classical music concerts in the evenings, and the social atmosphere of the outdoor bar, lounge and nighbclub," Al said.

"Our favorite memory, however, is of the long walks we took along the beautiful beaches," Gewn added. "Al would point out to me octopus, trumpet fish, high hats and various shells such as cowries and giant clams.

"Because of the crystal-clear skies, the sunsets were spectacular," Al said. "The most beautiful sunset we saw was during our three-day trip to Bora Bora. The Club has a small village where the simple Polynesian life can still be enjoyed.

They employed every means of transportation to get us to Bora Bora from Moorea," Al recalled. "A World War II vintage bus took us to the Moorea airport where chickens walked lazily around as we waited for the two-passenger plane to take us to Papeete. At Faaa Airport in Papeete we watched the ground control man brush away land crabs with his feet as our venerable DC-4 took off for Bora Bora. We landed on an atoll surrounding Bora Bora, from there took a flat-bed truck to the boat launch; and then the boat docked us right at the Club hotel on a magnificent lagoon.

"While at Bora Bora we met the crews from several private sailing vessels which had been in a race from California to Bora Bora."

Besides the bicycle trip which the Wilmots took around the whole island of Bora Bora, they had many opportunities to talk with the local people on their walks through the island. "French is the official language of Tahiti but English is widely spoken (in addition to Tahitian, of course.)" Gwen said. "We found the natives very friendly and willing to visit in Bora Bora.

"Our last day in Tahiti was spent in Papeete where we stayed at the luxurious Maeva Beach Hotel trying to readjust to civilization once more.

'The World from Carmel'

"The World from Carmel" is the title of a new section appearing this week in the Pine Cone. With the great interest in domestic and foreign travel among the residents of this area it should be a welcome addition to the pages of the paper.

Beginning next week we will feature articles by Monterey Peninsula travel agents as well as by local residents on their travels and photographs by Carmelites from their trips. We will welcome articles from our readers on unusual travel happenings, places to see, dine and stay.

The cooperation of a travel agent in your trip planning can greatly ease your planning and increase the enjoyment of a trip in this country or abroad.

They can plan your transportation, lodging and things to see and do wherever you may be going. We urge you to see a travel agent whenever you are taking any journey for their services are performed without any charge to you. In fact, they can actually save you money by pointing out ways to schedule your travels that may result in lower costs to you.

THE IRON HORSE SALOON upstairs in the Royal Inn, Monterey is featuring the funky sounds of Coalition. The four member group from New Orleans is not just an exceptional band, it is possibly the best dance band on the Peninsula right now! One of their most frequent requests (and this group can play almost any request, by the way) is the currently popular "Cisco Kid." Coalition plays everything from Chicago to Roberta Flack. Jude is on keyboards, Dino on drums, Chris is lead guitar and Joe bass guitar ... all four members of this talented group sing as well as play. They perform Tuesday through Saturday till 1:30.

DON'T MISS THE AFTERGLOW at the Holiday Inn, Carmel Wednesday through Sundays from 9 p.m. to 1:30 a.m. Their female vocalist, Marie Chavez has about 14 costume changes! She keeps you guessing as she changes almost every set. From San Jose originally, Marie adds a lot of life to the group. There is a lot of crowd contact when Afterglow performs. Larry Alexander, leader of the group and drummer feels that there "should never be a barrier between the performers on the stage and the audience."

THE COCKTAIL LOUNGE OF THE ROYAL INN, Monterey is now featuring Sal Mercurio and Group. They can play all the top 40 tunes or almost any request you may have. Why not get out there and try them soon? Sal Mercurio plays the cordovox, Brad Bivens is on guitar, William La Pine on drums. These are all local boys and they really keep the Royal Inn jumping! One of the group's favorites is "Wave."

GOOD RESPONSE FROM THE AUDIENCE with a lot of people dancing is what's happening at the Del Monte Hyatt House where Two Easy Pieces is performing in the lounge from 9 to 1:30. The crowds really seem to like this duo--Lee Durley on organ and Jim La Pine on drums. They are quite versatile and some of their most popular requests are "Killing Me Softly," "Joy to the World," "I Can See Clearly Now," and "Watermelon Man". . . How's that for a variety!

New look at 'Hamlet'

"Rosencranz and Gildenstern Are Dead," which takes a look at Shakespeare's "Hamlet" from the point of view of two insignificant characters, will open at 8 p.m. Friday at the Monterey Peninsula College Theatre.

The production, presented by the MPC Players, employs comic insight into one of the most famous dramas in literature. The opening night benefit is sponsored by the Arts Coordinating Council.

"Hamlet" will be produced by the MPC Players at 8 p.m. May 3, 5, 11, 17, 19 and 25, with 2 p.m. matinees May 13 and 27.

"Rosencrantz and Gildenstern Are Dead" will play at 8 p.m. May 4, 10, 12, 18, 24 and 26, with matinee performances at 2 p.m. May 6 and 20.

Tickets are available at the door.

BUILDING PLANS

"Future plans call for the start of additional buildings, west of Carmel Rancho Boulevard, in early fall," observed the Sept. 19, 1963 Pine Cone.

'Sometimes' features soft sounds

"Sometimes," an acoustic-electric group from Woodstock, N.Y. consisting of two studio musicians and an ex-coffee house singer, begins an engagement this week at King's Cross Station in Pacific Grove.

Tom Groves, 30, of Santa Barbara, and Todd Epstein, 23, of Woodstock, N.Y., who play bass and guitar respectively, have worked in recording studios in New York City and San Francisco.

Jon Zobler, 23, the lead vocalist and acoustic guitarist, has worked in college coffee houses on the East Coat and has played with the Byrds.

"We can do country, folk-type songs, rock songs, almost anything," says Epstein. Groves and Epstein played together in a group known as "Hallelulah" before forming "Sometimes."

They describe their sound as "mellow," as opposed to some of the harsher, driving sounds of conventional rock. This is because "we're quieter than a lot of groups -- it's listening music," Groves explains.

Much of their material is composed by Epstein, but their repertoire includes the music of the Beatles, Leon Russell, Van Johnson, and others.

They will be at King's Cross Station from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Wednesdays through Saturdays until the end of June.

RAY BISHOP of Pacific Grove, an avid reader of the Pine Cone, supplied us with a little humor a la Watergate.

Conversation between President Nixon and Sen. Tom Eagleton:

"Come on in, Senator."

"Thank you, Mr. President."

"Tom, what I wanted to make perfectly clear is this -- we haven't been getting too many bills from the Senate lately and the White House staff was wondering why."

"Well, Mr. President, you see, we've been sending over a huge pile of them every day. But I understand your staff has been hiding them because they're afraid it might usurp some of your executive powers."

"Now, that's ridiculous, Tom. Nobody here should be nervous about their jobs. I'm behind them 1,000 percent."

Ahem.

THE MUSIC CORNER

By IRVING W. GREENBERG

UNDER THE AUSPICES of the Alliance Francaise of the Monterey Peninsula, Gilbert Boyer, well-known pianist, gave a recital for their scholarship fund last Sunday at the Tantamount Theater in Carmel Valley. This was one of the programs, among others, that he will perform on his fourthcoming tour of Europe. Gilbert Boyer has again shown himself to be a pianist of rare sensitivity and excellent technical accomplishments.

The Mendelssohn Rondo Capriccioso, Op. 14, which began the program, is one of those perennial works that endures. The nocturne-like melody of the opening andante was spaciously performed, and led easily into the lovely effects of the presto. The broad second theme emerged under Boyer's fingers into a mood of artful and animated playfulness. The elfin figure that returned heralded a wild flight of the fingers of the performer and led directly to the ending octave pyrotechnics in a most exciting manner.

The Chopin Sonata No. 2 in B flat minor, Op. 35 is scored for four movements: Grave, Scherzo, Marche funebre-lento, and Finale-presto. The opening subject was played with breathless lyricism, at times agitatedly. The demonic nature of the Scherzo was beautifully counterbalanced with a gracious thematic invocation. The Marche funebre -- probably one of the best-known sections of a sonata -- was given the symbolic lyricism inherent in its nature and melodic line. The finale, very daring for Chopin's day, is a stroke of genius on the part of the composer and was displayed by Boyer in a most affecting manner.

The Slnimsky Variations of a Brazilian Kindergarten Tune is a work close to Boyer's affection, as he is particularly fond of interpreting the work of Latin-American composers and those having an interest in this type of music. It was a charming and graceful rendition.

The Griffes White Peacock was played with the sensitivity and the delicate mood of the lovely tone picture; the Copland Cat and Mouse is a short programmatic piece depicting the antics of these two animals and it fared equally well. The Robert Brown (a California composer resident in Salinas) Seagulls and Dance Macabre was most effective in its polytonality and its well-defined rhythmic and harmonic lines. The four Debussy works: Nocturne, Danse, Etude No. 11 - Pour Les Arpeges Composees, and L'Isle Joyeuse -- really showed Boyer at his very best. He is particularly successful and has a strong affinity for the lyric beauty of the French impressionists. Particularly outstanding was his rendition of the Etude, in which Boyer brought forth in a most artistic manner the harmonic development of the composer's musical theories. Also beautifully painted in glowing tonal colors was the better-known L'Isle Joyeuse.

Comments by Boyer in French and English about the works added immeasurably to the enjoyment of the pianistic performance of this most competent pianist.

ON MAY 6 and 7, the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra will be joined by the Monterey Peninsula Choral Society with soloists Norma Jean Hodges, soprano, and James Tippey, baritone, in the last performance of the season. For this occasion, Maestro Haymo Taeuber has programmed Johannes Brahms' German Requiem, and Leonard Bernstein's Chichester Psalms.

Brahms: German Requiem

The German Requiem occupies a special place among the works of Brahms. It has been called the most personal musical expression to which he ever gave utterance. It was to him not only a means of rising above the grief he felt in losing two of those who had been closest to him, but also a kind of musical "coming of age," the full mastery of his technique and the definite establishment of the Brahms style. He chose his texts from a source that he knew intimately -- the Scriptures.. The Requiem was important to Brahms because from the day of its premiere dates his full acceptance as one of the masters.

The Requiem was conceived during one of the saddest periods of Brahms' life. During the summer of 1864, his parents, an oddly-assorted pair, his mother being 17 years his father's senior, came to a parting of the ways. Brahms' efforts to repair the breach were fruitless; they only left him with the obligation of supporting his mother and sister. Then, on Feb. 2, 1865, he received word from his brother in Hamburg that his mother was dying. The journey from Vienna to Hamburg was a long one in those days, and Brahms arrived too late. It is said that he had for some time been planning a brief choral work in memory of his friend and benefactor Robert Schumann, and as it began to take shape his original one movement expanded to four. After several restless months and some concert touring with the violinist Joachim, Brahms found peace in the home of a friend at Karlsruhe, and there the Requiem, in its original six-movement form, was brought to completion. The official premiere took place on Good Friday, April 10, 1868, when Brahms himself conducted the Requiem in the cathedral in Bremen. Within a month, there was a second performance; subsequently a new movement was added: "Ihr habt nur Traurigkeit" (Ye now are sorrowful), in which the soprano solo soars sublimely above the chorus. This movement, dedicated to the memory of his mother, was first heard in the Leipzig Gewandhaus Feb. 18, 1869.

In the case of the Requiem, Brahms has been blamed for not doing precisely what he aimed not to do - for not composing a Requiem Mass. His very title should have forestalled such criticism: Ein deutsches Requiem, nach Worten den heiligen Schrift (A German Requiem, after words of the Holy Scriptures). The Brahms Requiem is in no sense liturgical. It is essentially a Protestant conception, in which the keynote is not terror but the consolation of death. It has been remarked that it resembles the Church of England's burial service, which is purely coincidental. What is more striking is the absence of any direct reference to Christ, from which is must be concluded that Brahms intended his music to be completely non-sectarian.

A remarkable structural feature of the Requiem is the symmetry resulting from the relationship between the first and seventh movements (which share not only their message of consolation but their musical conclusion, as well), between the second (with its dance of death) and the sixth (with its vision of the Last Judgement), and between the anxious third and the comforting fifth. The gentle fourth stands as the focal point in the center -- "How lovely is thy dwelling place, O Lord of hosts."

The various sectionsof the work are as follows:

I. "Selig sind, die da Leid tragen" (Blessed are they that mourn) for chorus.

II. "Denn alles Fleisch, es ist wie Gras" (For all flesh is as grass) for chorus.

III. "Herr, lehre doch mich" (Lord, make me to know mine end) for baritone and chorus.

IV. "Wie lieblich sind deine Wohnungen" (How amiable are thy tabernacles) for chorus.

V. "Ihr habt nun Traurigkeit" (And ye now therefore have sorrow) for soprano and chorus.

VI. "Denn wir haben hier kleine bleibende Statt" (for here have we no continuing city") for baritone and chorus.

VII. "Selig sind die Toten" (Blessed are the Dead) for chorus.

Bernstein: Chichester Psalms

THE CATHEDRAL of Chichester in Sussex, England joins choral forces with the Cathedrals of Winchester and Salisbury every summer to produce a music festival. For the Festival of 1965, Leonard Bernstein was commissioned by the Dean of Chichester to write the Chichester Psalms. This work was completed on May 7, 1965, and is a choral composition in Hebrew. This work is unlike any of Bernstein's previous works in this genre; the new work is a paean of serenity and humility. The Psalms chosen concern war and peace, but the "I and thou" image is pre-eminent and influences much of the music.

The opening chorus, from Psalm 108, is a majestic introit, which appears again at the end of the first movement and at the start and end of the last movement. It leads directly into a joyful dance-like setting of Psalm 100.

The second movement begins with a lyric solo from Psalm 23 by a boy alto accompanied by simple intervals on the harp. This folk-like melody is repeated by the alto choir in a canon, but it is suddenly interrupted by an outburst from the men's choir "Why do the nations rage?" from Psalm 2 in dramatic opposition to the previous pastoral section. The violence moves away, and the altos resume softly and insistently Psalm 23, with the orchestra whispering a reminder of the disturbances, so the movement ends on an equivocal note.

The third movement is also reminiscent of Bernstein's previous "Kaddish;" it is an orchestral meditation introducing the finale. Unlike the "Kaddish" Symphony, the instrumental reverie here is a preparation for a warm, comforting conclusion. This rendition of Psalm 131 finally subsides into an a cappella version of the opening chorale, a coda of yearning for peace (Psalm 133). A single unison "Amen" brings the Psalms to a close, as a solo trumpet gently recalls the first phrase of the chorale. The scoring is for strings, three trumpets, three trombones, two harps, and a large percussion section.

Citizens' committee calls high school science facilities 'inadequate'

A CITIZENS committee named to investigate the Carmel Unified School District's science program has leveled a searing blast at Carmel High School's science facilities.

"The facilities are not inadequate -- they should be condemned!" James Miller, chairman of the committee, told the board of trustees at last Wednesday's meeting.

"They're so bad, it makes me ashamed that this community, with as much money as it spends on other things, should have such an inadequate facility," he said. "The place is a shack -- an absolute shack.

"You have 300 students in Biology 1, and you still don't have adequate microscopes there. The equipment is shabby -- the place they have to work is a shame -- and the heating plant is inadequate."

Miller told the board if something is not done to remedy the situation, "a few years down the stream you'll be on double sessions." He also accused the board of saving money "year after year after year by failing to put money in that plant."

But Supt. Harris Taylor disagreed, and told Miller "we've put a lot of money in that building. The high school receives adequate money to buy microscopes. Either the science department is not aggressive enough, or non-communicative, or something."

"Given the money, the teachers would have bought the microscopes; some administrator decided it. There the blame lies," Miller retorted.

"You can't substantiate that," Taylor said.

"Yes, I believe I can," Miller shot back.

Al Graham, chairman of the Carmel High School science department, said the department spent some $2,000 for supplies last year, and said this year's budget is about $6,000, which includes expenses for books and other equipment.

Carmel High School principal Kenneth Bullock said the board of trustees "has failed historically to put this replacement in the proper perspective."

"Nothing has been put aside to replace the building, either," Miller told the board.

The report is one of a series being prepared by citizens' committees in connection with the district's implementation of the Stull Act - a measure requiring citizen input into the redesigning of curricula at all grade levels. The law requires such criteria as one part of a new teacher tenure law which specifies grounds for dismissal for professional reasons.

"The most critical need at the present time is ... the need to provide adequate space, facilities, and equipment for the high school science program," the science report said. "Alleviating the shortage of equipment in the biology laboratories can be effected immediately at moderate cost; the problem of providing adequate space and facilities, is, however, another matter and bears heavily on the future plans for utilization of the high school plant.

"In view of the noted tendency for enrollments to increase, this is a question which the board can scarcely postpone."

THE MEMBERS of the science citizens' committee are Lori Dawson, Mona Mehdy, John Scroggs, and James Miller. The committee reviewed curriculum materials and interviewed teachers, administrators, and some students.

"There is evidence of outstanding efforts in the area of scientific education as exemplified by the program under the direction of Mr. Reuter of Tularcitos School," the committee said of the elementary school science program.

It made the following recommendations for the elementary science program:

-- Steps should be taken administratively to ensure that each elementary student be exposed to a science oriented teacher for at least one year. ("Only through conscious staff recruitment and management can such a goal be attained," the report noted.)

-- Adequate science resource materials be maintained in each elementary school to support the work of its science staff "and to serve as an incentive to the science-oriented student."

-- A science advisor be established in each elementary school.

-- Consideration be given to hiring teacher aides who can assist regular teachers.

The committee made the following recommendations about the district's middle school science program:

-- Retention of the intermediate science curriculum study in the seventh and eighth grades for "the large majority of the students."

-- Retention of the ungraded option taught by Al Kolb. ("For those students whose interest transcends the structure of the ISCS program, and for some students whose motivation needs special attention, the program of tutorial instruction under the direction of Mr. Kolb offers a more effective educational experience," the committee found.)

-- Development of a "technology-oriented science course to motivate students of lower academic ability."

-- The opportunity for ability grouping be made available to the faculty.

-- Limitation of class size to the present level of 26 to 28.

-- An increase in the in-service budget for teachers.

-- Provision of a sixth grade science classroom.

-- Consideration be given to expansion of the laboratory facilities at Middle School.

The committee said it was "unable to understand the rationale of a policy which permits the substitution of one-half year of health education for a full year of laboratory science" in the high school program.

The committee also felt there is too much emphasis in the high school upon biological, rather than physical, sciences.

"INSPECTION OF the physical plant revealed an appalling lack of adequate instructional materials and equipment in the three biology laboratories," the report said. It branded storage and teaching space available to the science department "totally inadequate," and made these recommendations:

-- Construction of "new and properly equipped science laboratories at the earliest possible date."

-- Equipment of the biology laboratories with "an adequate number of modern microscopes and other apparatus necessary for instruction."

-- That the half-year of health education be permitted to replace only a half-year of laboratory science requirements and that the two-year requirement be retained.

-- Efforts be made to "Broaden the base of scientific background" as additional teaching staff are recruited.

-- Expansion of science offerings to include an advanced physics or chemistry course for "science-oriented students" and a technology course for "less adademically oriented" students.

-- Establishment of a system of weighted credits in setting graduation requirements "which recognizes the relative difficulty of the various courses."

A response by the Carmel High School science department was made to each of the seven suggestions of the committee. The department agreed that a new science laboratory should be constructed, but noted "the drastic action recommended by the citizens' committee involves sinks, plumbing, lighting, student laboratory desks, electrical changes, doors, etc."

The science department said it believes "the cost of moving and changes that would be necessary ... would probably be greater than a new science building on the present high school site."

The other responses of the science department:

-- Agreement that "at least 30 compound microscopes and 30 dissecting microscopes" plus complete laboratory equipment for the third biology laboratory is needed.

-- A recommendation that if the two-year science requirement for graduation is retained, quarter or semester courses be added to the curriculum to add "variety of choice."

-- "Student demand in science result in the need for several teachers, and they should certainly be selected with utmost care," in response to the committee's request that an effort be made to broaden the base of scientific background of teachers.

-- The offering of advanced physics, chemistry, or electronics "involves additional staff time and much equipment. The quality of courses we would like to see added are expensive and must have continuing support, not at the expense of some other department."

-- "When semester or quarter courses are offered to add variety, the number of sections for the next year must be known (in science) for the whole year. The student should have choices, but if selections could be made in the spring for the full coming year, better planning could be done."

Can Cal-Am supply adequate water?

By PAT GRIFFITH

DEVELOPERS, conservationists and county officials have something in common this week.

They share an anxious interest in what steps, if any, the Public Utilities Commission will take following last week's hearings on the current and future water needs of the Monterey Peninsula.

Of most immediate concern is the application by the California-American Water Company to extend its service to present and future homeowners in Hidden Hills, a 2,000-acre subdivision west of Laureles Grade.

The present Hidden Hills developer presented two water experts who testified that Cal-Am has ample water available to serve new customers without building a major new dam.

But the PUC staff reported the opposite conclusion: that Cal-Am has already overextended its service and does not have enough water from existing sources to supply Hidden Hills or any other new subdivision.

The related but separate question before the PUC is a much broader one: Is the Peninsula facing the imminent threat of a water shortage and, if so, should the water company be restrained from serving any additional customers until it can supply more water from a new dam on the upper Carmel River or from more wells in Carmel Valley?

Many conservationists are openly hoping that the PUC will follow the advice of its own staff and issue an order restraining Cal-Am from taking on any new committments, including Hidden Hills, until it has a new dam in operation.

Such an order, according to PUC engineer James Barnes, "would mean no more building permits, period" for at least five years, or however long it would take to get a new dam completed.

So far no local official has put it quite that strongly.

"In my mind, a restraining order from the PUC would have a great effect on any decision I would make as a supervisor," Supervisor Willard Branson said this week.

"I'm not saying that I would reject everything, but I would think that the water question is critical. Not just the availability of water, but the quality of water.

"The PUC hearings have put everything into focus as far as I'm concerned. I think the PUC people said it better than anyone else."

"If the PUC did tell Cal-Am that it is limited to the amount of water it is now drawing, it would have an effect of a possible building ban."

County Planning Director Ed DeMars said that the PUC hearings had focused more attention on water problems, but added: "Water has always been a critical question in this area, and it will continue to be."

BUT SOME OF those most deeply immersed in the local development scene contend that their projects can go ahead even without Cal-Am.

"We think there are short-term answers for taking care of ourselves," explained Carl Hooper of George Bestor and Associates, the Monterey engineering firm involved in six major developments in lower Carmel Valley. These include Carmel Lago, Riverwood, Carmel Rancho Shopping Center phase three, the Odello redevelopment, Thomas Schaal's Carmel River Project, and the just-announced 462-unit Villas Carmel del Pacifico.

The Carmel Pine Cone

SECTION III

"Most of the developers we're working with happen to own river frontage. If everything else failed, it would be feasible to put in small wells on our own property until Cal-Am is in a position to serve them."

As an example, he said, the Odellos have an existing well which they use for irrigation.

"To rework that for domestic use wouldn't take any more water out of the ground. People use less water than artichokes, you know."

Similarly, he continued, Riverwood could sink its own well in the river. But he doesn't foresee that as a likely possibility because Cal-Am signed a contract on Feb. 26 to extend its water main to serve the first 43 units of Riverwood.

Hooper said well water could also serve the proposed Villas Carmel del Pacifico development, planned for 497 acres on the north side of Carmel Valley Road, opposite Meadows Road.

He estimated this might cost the developer $10,000 to $12,000 for a well and $18,000 to $20,000 for a pipeline connecting it with the development.

"The cost is low compared to sitting on the land for the next two or three years,' commented George Bestor.

Hooper is also confident several hundred acre feet of water a year could be developed from new wells in the Canyon del Rey area on the outskirts of Monterey, which could serve development on the Work Ranch and in the Laguna Seca area.

"This would be only for interim use to take care of that development which occurs before the completion of a dam," he emphasized. "And there are existing wells on various ranches than can be used and supplemented.

"There is a quality problem there, but there's always the feasibility of blending San Clemente water with well water."

IT'S THE QUESTION OF QUALITY which particularly concerns Walter Wong, environmental control officer for the county health department.

"It's going to be very difficult for anyone to meet our quality standards from well water," Wong said.

"Right now our department is saying that all developments have to go with Cal-Am. And if a development isn't in the franchise area of Cal-Am we still propose that they don't use wells because it is awfully difficult to meet our requirements."

Wong said that health department now requires a letter from Cal-Am saying it can definitely serve a new development before the county will approve a proposed water system.

This step has been taken to prevent a recurrence of the Hidden Hills situation, in which the subdivision expanded rapidly by increments without an adequate water supply.

"Hidden Hills wouldn't develop again," Wong said. "First you'd have to have the water system developed before any homes could be occupied."

The lack of adequate water has resulted in what amounts to building bans in several areas of the county, Wong noted, including areas of Aromas and King City.

The county counsel's office has drafted a well ordinance which, if passed by the board of supervisors, will regulate the Water application in hands of PUC

EXPERTS HIRED by the developer for Hidden Hills testified before a Public Utilities Commission hearing in Monterey last week that the California-American Water Company can meet the Peninsula's water needs without building a costly new dam.

The commission is considering an application by Cal-Am to serve Hidden Hills and is also investigating the overall water supply.

Geologist Robert Bean said his study of the Valley indicates the storage capacity of the aquifer is 37,537 acre feet, of which at least 15,000 acre feet could be considered useable water.

This is about three times as great as the combined capacities of Los Padres and San Clemente dams.

Bean said that the underground water coupled with the current dams "can easily accommodate a future demand of 20,000 acre feet."

Bean was formerly with the California Department of Water Resources and served for over five years as a technical advisor with the United Nations.

His testimony followed that of another expert hired by Standard International, Michael R. Stansbury, who said Cal-Am could meet the increasing demand for water by enlarging its pipe system leading from the dams.

Stansbury, a civil engineer, estimated it would cost $1½ million to enlarge the transmission system for a distance of approximately 10 miles. He said this would need to be done anyway if the company decides to build a dam and that, by itself, it could increase the safe yield coming from the dams to an average of 14,000 acre feet a year.

Both Bean's and Stansbury's testimony ran directly counter to a report from the PUC staff issued earlier in the two-day hearing.

The staff report declared that "the safe annual yield of the existing sources of supply has been exceeded and development of an additional source of supply is urgently needed. Impoundment of larger quantities of surface water in the Carmel Valley seems to be the most reasonable method of augmenting the present supply."

Their testimony also disagreed, in degree, with information presented by Cal-Am's own expert, Albert I. Bennett.

Bennett, an engineer with American Water Works Company, Cal-Am's parent corporation, said that "tentative studies" show that Cal-Am has a current safe yield of 18,000 acre feet and is now using about 17,000 acre feet annually.

He based his statement on studies done for Cal-Am by Kennedy Engineers in 1968. This report showed a safe yield of 9,500 acre feet from the Carmel River, 5,000 acre feet from Carmel Valley wells and 3,500 acre feet from the company's wells in Seaside.

IN CONTRAST, the PUC staff set the safe yield for the three sources at 8,500 acre feet, 5,000 acre feet and 2,000 acre feet respectively, giving a total safe yield of 15,500 acre feet.

The varying expert testimony concluded two days of public hearings by the PUC in the Monterey City Council Chambers.

The session ended with PUC Examiner Edmund Catey receiving diametrically opposed motions from attorneys representing the Hidden Hills developer and the PUC staff.

Boris H. Lakusta, attorney for Standard International, called upon the PUC to issue an interim order approving Cal-Am's pending application to serve water to present and future homes in Hidden Hills.

"I think we have made a strong enough case," Lakusta said.

But Cyril M. Saroyan, attorney for the PUC, demanded "bold, positive action" by the PUC to restrain Cal-Am from serving any additional customers, including the Hidden Hills subdivision.

Saroyan dismissed the testimony presented by the water company and developer as having "some immediate self-interest, some axe to grind."

He also noted it had not "stood the test of cross-examination."

That will come later, possibly the first week of June, when the PUC hearing will reconvene to allow further questioning of witnesses and presentation of additional information.

Examiner Catey said the commission would consider both motions along with testimony received so far and then decide whether or not to issue any interim order. This process is expected to take about a month.

FOURTH DISTRICT Supervisor Roger Poyner also put in a brief appearance last week to urge the PUC to approve Cal-Am water service to existing homeowners in Hidden Hills.

"I wish to stand up for them. They do have a unique problem," Poyner said. "The cost for them to develop their own wells and water system would be prohibitive."

Poyner also expressed his personal concern about how a new dam on the Carmel River would be financed, saying he would be opposed to a method "which would be at the expense of the present users to benefit the large property owners."

He suggested the possibility that the county might become involved to help spread costs more equitably throughout the district.

ALSO TESTIFYING last week were Sam Estassi, president of the Los Laureles Homeowners Association, and Forrest D. Hall, president of the Hidden Hills Homeowners Association.

Both gave the PUC petitions signed by residents of the Hidden Hills area asking that the water service application be approved.

Another person appearing on behalf of Hidden Hills, as well as his own property, was Carmel engineer Gilbert Neill.

Neill and his brother, Clayton Neill Jr. of Carmel Valley, are currently developing 45 homesites on 86 acres known as Rancho Tierra Grande No. 4, which is adjacent to Hidden Hills.

Neill stated that he and his brother own 262 acres altogether, and plan an additional 90 homesites by 1976.

He said these homes will need to be served by Cal-Am.

WHEN THE hearing opened Tuesday morning, PUC Examiner Catey invited Cal-Am to present its information on water supply and information on its plans for a new dam on the Carmel River, as well as material which would support its application to serve Hidden Hills.

In response, Cal-Am attorney Rosenberg said that company officials had not had sufficient time to conduct in-depth studies of the current and future water situation.

He asked for a continuance for six months to allow the company time to complete its economic feasibility studies.

His request was strongly opposed by Saroyan and Lakusta, the latter observing tartly that "it strains my credibility to believe that a water company would file an application without being prepared ... There is a contractural obligation on the part of Cal-Am to proceed, and proceed without excuses."

The request for a continuance was turned down by Catey, who noted that the staff had come prepared and the PUC wanted to hear comments from the public regarding water service on the Monterey Peninsula.

And comments it got, including blistering opening remarks by Supervisor Willard Branson, who castigated the water company for what he termed "absolute dereliction of duty as a public utility."

construction, operation and abandonment of wells.

The proposed ordinance sets standards aimed at preventing pollution or contamination of wells, and requires that a permit be obtained from the health department before any well may be drilled. This would be in addition to the use permit now required.

"In Carmel Valley," Wong explained, "one reason why we're so particular with regard to waste disposal is that the Carmel River is the watershed for the entire Peninsula. If we increase the chemical or bacterial content of the water, we ruin the basic water supply.

"Because of quality standards, only a few shallow wells are permitted in the lower valley right now. We know that these wells have had an iron problem. We'd be very concerned about the quality from any new wells."

Branson said the Regional Water Quality Control Board, of which he is chairman, would also be involved in assessing the quality of water coming from additional wells in Carmel Valley.

WHILE THERE IS general agreement that Cal-Am should move ahead as quickly as possible to build a new dam on the upper Carmel River, there is little agreement on how the dam should be financed.

The PUC staff report last week noted it would be "very unfair" to present Cal-Am customers to have to pay the bill for a $24 million dam needed to meet future growth on the Peninsula.

"If future growth is the cause of large capital expenditures, then those responsible for creating the growth should bear the burden of providing the necessary financing," the PUC report said.

Hooper said a precedent for a "new development fee" has been set by the Carmel Sanitary District.

"Four or five years ago it cost $55 for a connection for a single family residence to the sanitary district," he said. "Now it's $250 for a single family connection, on a sliding scale."

Hooper said no developer obviously would request the privilege of paying an additional fee, "but if it is part of the cost of doing business and the consumer realizes he is paying a special fee to buy a new home in a new subdivision rather than a home in another area, it's something we have to face.

"But there should be equity. A new dam is going to supply water for all growth in the area for 20 or 40 years or whatever. Any fee should be pro rata on the total number of dwelling units to be created during that period."

Hooper also argued that new subdivisions, by themselves, do not add to the Peninsula's water problems.

"The mere fact that a development is approved is not necessarily going to increase the population," he said. "The water problem is related to occupied dwelling units, not those under construction.

"When you hear talk about 1,000 new units, that's over a 10-year period, and Cal-Am and the PUC expect to take care of the water problem in five to seven years with a new dam.

"There are only going to be so many people moving to the Peninsula. New developments are causing no real problem. They are simply giving people a choice. If they decide to live here, whatever they choose, they'll be using Cal-Am anyway."

Hooper feels there is too much concern about large subdivisions, and too little public attention given to new lots created through the minor subdivision ordinance. In 1972, county-wide, 1,180 new lots were created through minor subdivisions (four parcels or fewer) and 1,081 lots through the normal subdivision process which requires approval by the planning commission and board of supervisors.

Planning Director De Mars said, however, that most of these minor subdivisions are in North County, and relatively few in the booming Carmel Valley area."

ANOTHER ENGINEER involved in development plans in Carmel is Gilbert Neill. He testified at the PUC hearing last week in support of the Hidden Hills application, which has a direct bearing on a future supply of water for 89 acres he and his brother are now developing as Rancho Tierra Grande No. 4.

Neill feels the PUC staff is "out on a limb" with its recommendation that Cal-Am be restrained from taking on new customers.

"They have presented an opinion, without supporting evidence," he said.

In contrast, he feels geologist Robert Bean and engineer Michael Stansbury, who testified in support of the Hidden Hills application presented "a great deal of factual information.

"Bean is a formidible expert in this field. He has to be listened to."

Neill is concerned people will jump on the water problem as a way to limit construction.

"If you want building restrictions, it should start right in the planning process, at the top. Plan a community for what you want in terms of economics and environment, and then match up your facilities to supply them. Otherwise you have the cart before the horse."

He expressed confidence the PUC will approve the Hidden Hills application.

"The Carmel River basin is a prolific supplier of water. As far as I know, it's never run out of water. It has a proved track record."

While other areas of the country have had to impose restrictions on watering lawns, he said, the Monterey Peninsula has enjoyed a plentiful water supply.

"Cal-Am is part of the American Waterworks System, which is the largest in the United States," he noted. "I'm strongly convinced they can do the job."

The mayor's report

By BERNARD ANDERSON

THIS HAS BEEN a rather busy week for the mayor. I try to check on all the requests for help, complaints and suggestions that come to the city chambers if they are of the nature that cannot be satisfactorily handled by the administrative staff. Sometimes the views expressed are conflicting, sometimes unreasonable; but usually there are problems which need straightening out. Our ordinances, while they are just, do at times seem unreasonable and need explaining or revising. It has always been a precept of mine to make certain all correspondence is answered, and without quips, snide or sarcastic remarks.

I'm reminded of some of the experiences of Eleanor Roosevelt in this regard. She received a touching letter from a mother whose son was in jail, asking Mrs. Roosevelt to visit him, which she did. Then she was begged to visit him once a week and read the Bible to him.

On another occasion a poor old woman of eighty, so poor she couldn't afford to pay for her dog's license, requested her to use her influence to have the state supervisor of dog licenses rescind the tax. Being the big-hearted woman she was, she paid the poor old lady's tax herself. It would be wonderful if we in Carmel could solve our dog problems as easily as that.

Sometimes the correspondence you receive in Carmel leads to unexpected results. As an example, an extremely vitriolic letter was received from a lady complaining bitterly that the parking lot at Sunset Center had been closed on a certain day. She stated she had had to keep a constant watch from her office window to check on the "Meter Maid' which necessitated moving her car every hour or so to avoid receiving an over-parking citation. From her wrathful letter, I assumed she had received a citation, but a check with the police did not reveal one.

A check with the Public Works Department indicated the Sunset Center parking lot had become rough and it was necessary to grade it smooth which required closing it to parking while the wark was done.

The lady's letter had been so completely unreasonable I felt a copy of our reply to her should also be given to her employer. Difficulty was to find her place of employment. When it was located, (lo and behold!) it turned out she was employed by a business establishment that was operating in the city without a license. It was a legitimate business so the city has now acquired additional revenue.

There is never a cloud without a silver lining.

COUNCILMAN BROWN and I spent last Wednesday at Fort Ord acquainting ourselves with community problems which may result from the closing of military installations with particular reference to local repercussions. General Moore and his staff have always been extremely cooperative in keeping city officials posted on the programs at Fort Ord, Hunter Liggett, the Presidio, etc.

The city engineer completed plans for entrance to the Doolittle Park area. It now remains to clear these plans and development program with the County and the State Water Quality Control Board.

The week ended with my throwing out the initial baseballs to opposing catchers to launch the Little League season at the Carmel Mission. Eight teams are included. John Calcagno was in charge of the program and the way the ceremonies went off without a hitch showed the results of detailed planning.

CHRISTIAN JUHRING of Carmel holds the American flag styled kite with which he won third-place in the high-flying aspect of the contest in the 8 years old and younger category.

Annual kite contest draws varied entries

Carmel's 43rd Annual Kite Contest was held under blustery grey skies last Saturday at the Carmel Middle School athletic field.

The weather apparently limited the size of the crowd, which was about 50 persons. But the kite entries were virtually limitless in imagination -- featuring everything from a flying Snoopy dog house to a silver-winged kite.

The event was sponsored by the Carmel Lions Club.

Monica Woodcock of Salinas took the Willis White Award for the best-designed kite, which was the Snoopy dog house, complete with Snoopy on top. Although the kite was interesting, it had aeronautical problems, but managed to stay aloft long enough to win the prize.

MUCH OF THE treatment process utilizes these tanks. In the foreground are the two primary sedimentation tanks, in the center are the four aerator tanks while the round tank in the back is the secondary sedimentation tank.

Sewage plant functioning smoothly

By JORUNE JONIKAS

Though not a topic for polite drawing room discussion, sewage is a basic fact of life and the unavoidable product of society. Its disposal is the inheritance of a civilized society.

Efficiency, combined with a concern for the environment, is of primary importance in the operation of the Carmel Sanitary District's new treatment plant. The intricate mass of pipes, tanks and machinery went into operation one month ago and in spite of a few minor problems, the system is functioning smoothly.

The plant consists of an operations building, a laboratory building, a grit washer, two primary sedimentation tanks, four aerator tanks, one secondary sedimentation tank, some anaerobic tanks and a structure which houses the chlorine injector and effluent pumps.

The operations building houses offices, a main power control panel, an emergency generator and an operations control room. Dominating the control room is a schematic diagram of the plant across one wall, with different colored lines indicating various pipes and boxes indicating the structures and the operations. Any malfunction anywhere in the plant registers immediately on the board.

Influent is pumped across the Carmel River through a metering device which registers the flow on a device on the control board. It then goes through a washer which removes all gritty material.

From there, the influent is pumped into the primary sedimentation tank where scrapers at the bottom do not allow the scum to settle and skimmers at the top eventually clear the surface of the scum.

The cleared waste water overflows into troughs and is channeled into the aerator tanks which Dave Kennedy of Kennedy Engineers described as "big culture tanks." As the waste water from the primary tank is pumped in, it is mixed with activated sludge returned from the secondary sedimentation tank.

The activated sludge contains aerobic bacteria (which are controlled by the amount of oxygen allowed into the tank). The bacteria utilize the contamination in the sewage as a food source.

The waste water from the aerator tanks then is pumped into the secondary sedimentation tank. Since this tank has no churning action, just a skimmer, the bacteria settle into activated sludge in the enclosed center of the tank and the almost clear waste water overflows into troughs and is channeled to a pipe leading to the final process.

Just before the water is pumped to the ocean outfall, it goes through a chlorination process. A chlorine injector measures the chlorine gas solution into the waste water and once that is done, the waste water is pumped through the effluent pipe line to the ocean.

Some of the effluent water, plant manager Max Drewien explained, is pumped back for plant use and irrigation. Activated sludge, he added, can be dried in outdoor beds and is used for fertilizer.

With the exception of the mechanical difficulties that still appear in the aeration equipment, the only things left to be done at the plant are the renovation of the old control building into a laboratory and the landscaping of the entire plant.

The entire plant is manned by six men (Drewien said it could use eight) who manage to keep it operating with the help of a complete telephone communications system.

The system's various installations work separately and yet together to produce what finally goes into the ocean -- effluent which is, as Drewien put it, 99.9 percent clearer than when it was first pumped across the river.

There is another installation at the plant, but this one is semi-permanent and has absolutely nothing to do with sewage treatment and disposal. It is a fairly old pick-up truck which boasts a sign identifying it as "Mrs. Bird's Maternity Hospital in Radiator" and another that asks that the truck not be moved until "after the big event."

Trustees chided for not repairing gym

The sharp words came from Barbara Sanford, a Rancho Rio Vista mother, who accused the board of neglecting its responsibilities in delaying action on the dilapidated gym.

Last week school trustees voted three to two not to spend some $75,000 to overhaul the gym until a decision is reached on the question of transferring Carmel Middle School to the present high school, and Carmel High School to the Middle School site.

"Who is losing out, the school board or our children?" Mrs. Sanford demanded. "I can't believe any of you have ever visited a PE class ... Do you know there are 900 students taking PE?

"You have been unfair to the students. I think the students should have priority. You are not supporting your students, your teachers, your principal or your citizen's curriculum committee."

Mrs. Sanford's challenge came only a few hours after the board rehashed the entire high school - middle school question at a lunchtime study session. No conclusions were reached during the informal discussion.

During the study session, Supt. Harris Taylor said it would be possible for the district to raise an additional $750,000 in the next two years with "a very little raise in taxes."

This amount, he said, would be enough to repair the high school, including the gym, and to provide funds for portable classrooms to take care of any sudden influx of students at the elementary level.

Tuesday night, board president James Miller again explained why he opposed immediate action on the high school gym.

"My objection to going ahead last week was I did not want a piecemeal operation," Miller told Mrs. Sanford. "I agree with you completely about the gym ... but I don't think that putting a floor and roof on will give us the program we need ... We're talking of possible major renovations, which will take a year. ..."

"You're procrastinating," Mrs. Sanford replied.

"If we do undertake a major renovation, the roof may be changed," Miller continued. "The roof in itself is not going to make a major difference."

"Why can't you have a plan in two weeks?" asked Mrs. Sanford. "Why does it take a year? Why handicap the kids?"

"Because for the first time we are considering the location of the high school," Miller said.

"I'm all for renovation," agreed trustee James Brock. "We had a good session today and talked of long range plans. We're going to start now with a view to the future. This is much better than a short-sighted view and patching, patching, patching."

"If you can walk through that cruddy thing and want your kids there, then you're not interested in kids," retorted Mrs. Sanford.

Trustee Richard Wilsdon commented that "some of us feel we need a total picture of what we're going to do and then work from that ...

"We made a tentative decision in 1968 to move the campus ... We probably should have done more then, I agree."

"You have a terrible problem, it exists today," Mrs. Sanford replied. "It affects 900 kids. It took four years to get a girls' athletic program through. I think you could come up with a plan in six weeks. I'd like to see it come back in an action item. I think you're being unfair."

Board members had agreed earlier to hold another study session on the complex problem in the near future, but no time or date was set.

Letters

Dear Sir:

Leopards don't change their spots and even black leopards, when examined closely, have them. So it is with a country's political leaders, all the way down to county level; and they stand revealed in our present water situation.

Instead of welcoming the first opportunity to arrest pending over-density of population based on lack of water, the cry now heard is: produce more water so we can entice more people to come here. More people would be to the advantage of bigtime developers, real estate profiteers and speculators, outside building industry and other gain-seekers. All of them spot many a political leader's mantle of office.

The glib argument remains the cliche: "You cannot stop progress." Or "You cannot deny people the right to come and live where you chose to live"; cliches ignoring completely the overriding forces of environment and ecology.

When leadership poisons man's peace of mind, as it is now doing, is it any wonder that voters ask, "Who can we trust?" The evidence points up the ever-ready decision to run counter to constituents' wishes in favor of the profit-motivated pack. Be it local or nationwide, the underlying intent of the people's supposed representatives comes through sooner or later.

Sincerely
ALEXANDER G. WEYGERS

TEAM manager Sabastian Bordanaro counsels the Roscelli Corp. Dodgers after their loss to the Pine Inn Athletics in their first game of the Carmel Little League season Saturday.

Little League season opens in Carmel

About 150 people watched Carmel Mayor Bernard Anderson toss out the first ball to start the little league season in Carmel noon Saturday.

Mayor Anderson tossed the ball to Nigel Cooper, catcher for the Roscelli Corp. Dodgers during the ceremonies. Seven games were played on both fields at Rio Road and Atherton Street.

In a preliminary major league game at 9:30 a.m. Derek Rayne trounced Granite Rock 19-9.

Pine Inn broke ahead from a scoreless game in the fourth inning to overwhelm the Roscelli Corp. 15-5 and La Playa ruffled the Carmel Sport Shop 15-6.

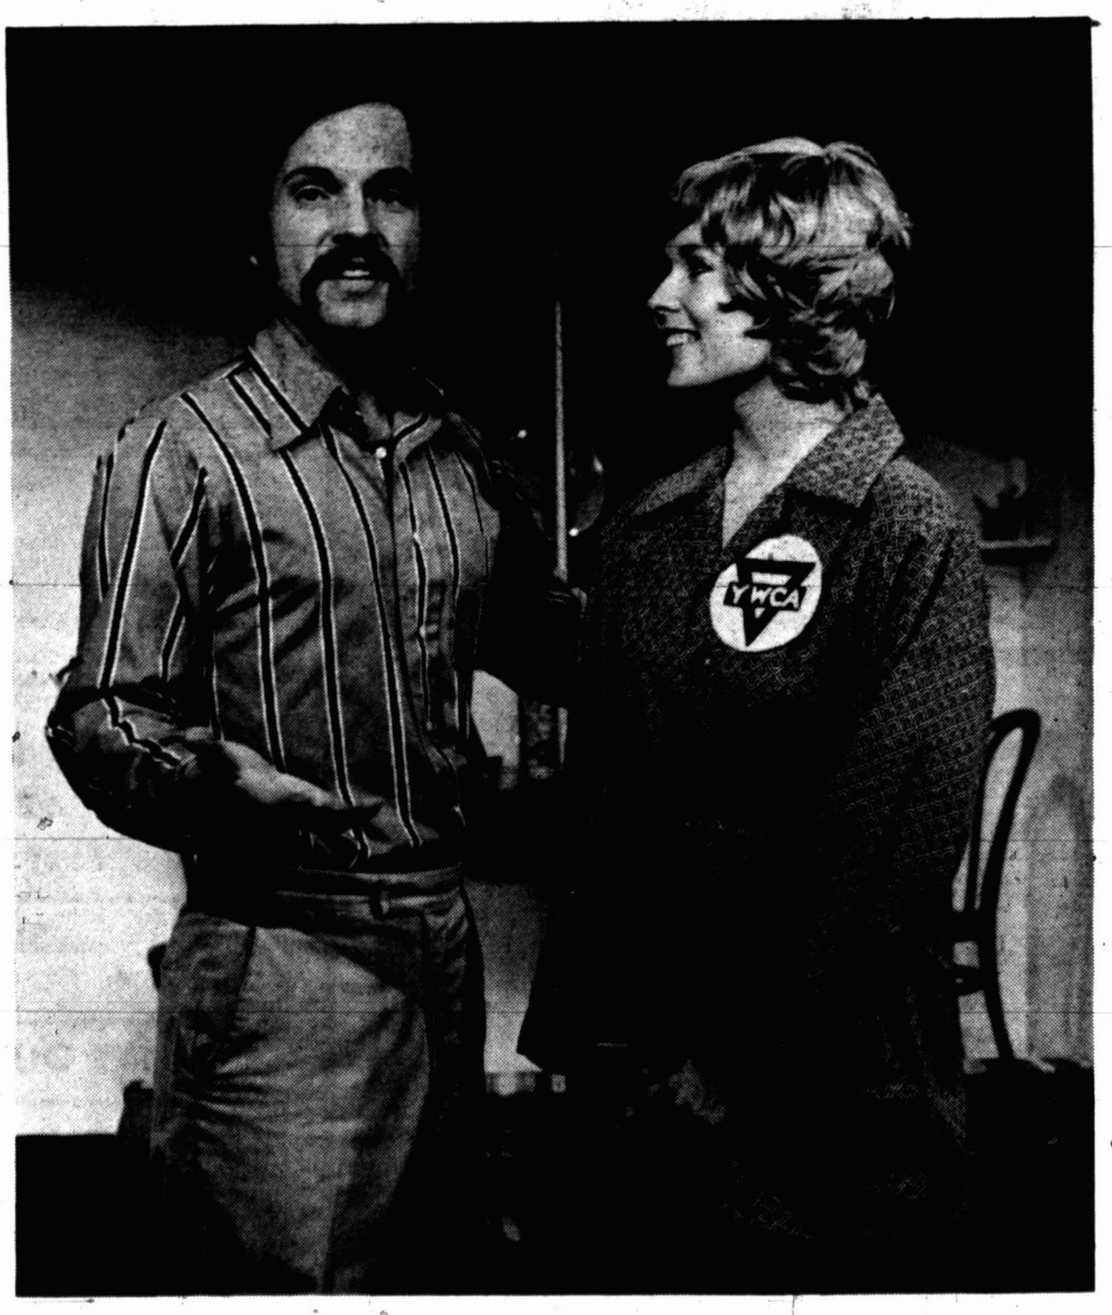
In the minor league: Village Inn 6, Village Hardware 5; Back Pocket 10, Mission Ranch 3; Carmel Plaza 7, Mediterranean Market 2; Orange Julius 12, McDonald's 11 with that game ending in the fourth inning due to darkness.

Monday night Roscelli Corp, recovered to wallop La Playa 14-7 in the major league game and Village Hardware defeated Mission Ranch 9-7 in the minors.

A major and minor league game is played daily at the little league field beside the Carmel Mission on Rio Road. Saturdays one major league and three minor league games are played starting at 9:30 a.m.

SINA SOTOODEH of the Pine Inn Athletics slides into third. The throw to thirdbaseman Ted Mendoza was slow and Sotoodeh was safe.

MIKE DODD of the Pine Inn Athletics strikes. He hit a double in the next inning.



"WILL YOU do it for America?" says publisher Andy Hobart (Steve Keener) as he asks "The Star-Spangled Girl," Olympic swimmer Sophie Rauschmeyer (Lanie Russell) to become his protest magazine's new secretary. The Neil Simon comedy closes this weekend at the Studio Theatre-Restaurant in Carmel. Reservations for this Friday and Saturday's final performances can be made at 624-1661.

Glyph stones at Big Sur

By DONALD M. HOWARD
Monterey County Archaeological Society

THE STRANGEST TRAIT which the California Indian possessed was the complete lack of any organized written language with alphabet symbols. The Costanoan, Esselen and the Salinan Indians of Monterey County were no exception, it would appear, until a recent finding by the Monterey County Archaeological Society.

Certain incised glyph symbols have been found in selected rock types of only serpentine and siltstone, which may indicate that these design elements conveyed meaning. The discovery of these stones seems to be indigenous only to the Big Sur coast between Big Creek and Gorda. This area would encompass the southern coastal territory of the Esselen, and extend south into the northern Playano dialect of the Salinan. It is thought by this author that these carved stones conveyed a register of time, or possibly poignant events in the life of the Indian, or perhaps symbolized a tribelets crest. At any rate, I believe that their significance lies in tradition, and not the result of haphazard doodling.

Three classes of stones have thus far been identified: seven sets of double parallel lines with perpendicular hash marks (figure 1), three chevrons with seven and 12 radiating lines. (figures A and B), and seven sets of double parallel lines with herringbone pattern (figure C).

NONE OF THESE stones has been found associated with interior sites, but in the Stony Valley area of the Hunter Liggett Military Reservation pictographs of charcoal are found in sandstone recesses which have the herringbone element (figure D). Of the four specimens known to this author, three of them possess groupings of seven in their design. Figure 1 has seven vertical parallel lines; figure A has seven radiating lines off of three chevrons, and figure C has seven parallel lines with the fifth line having seven ramifications.

Since many California pictograph designs were thought to have been made under the influence of "Loco" or Jimson Weed, the possibility arises that the Big Sur glyph stones were part of the Tolache initiation rite of young men into puberty. We do know that the figure 1 specimen found in the archaeological context of a site near Big Creek is in the neighborhood of 700 years old. A carbon 14 date was procured by the MCAS at this site, and is the first Esselen date to be acquired. Surface discoveries of these glyph stones may corroborate the fact that only later Indians used the symbolism of the glyph stones. Carvings discovered by the MCAS at Mission San Antonio de Padua do not reflect the Big Sur types, but show dominant Franciscan influence with crosses on radial spokes, and embossed floral patterns. It may be assumed that the glyph stones were pre-historic, and with the introduction of the Spanish calendar and religion, the use of these stones perished.

You wonder how it got there . . . a sapling far from the forest. And grew . . . alone, untended, little-noticed. And flourished to stand like a sentinel against the horizon.

Maybe a tree understands, as sometimes man does not, the secret of God. We are never alone!

What we need He has provided. What we are to become He has designed. The beauty and majesty and grace that can emanate from one object, one creature, He has envisioned and made real . . . for all to share.

There is no loner.

But when we feel alone, then, more than ever, we are drawn to God and His Church. In faith, in friendship with others who believe, in service to those who need our affection and care—we discover how deeply and satisfyingly we belong.

Our Churches

All Saints

Eucharists will be celebrated at the 8 a.m., 10 a.m., and 11 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Sunday services at the All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel.

The special speaker at 9:15 a.m. Sunday adult discussion class will be Nancy Lofton Morrow of Carmel Valley, a member of the California State Textbook Revision Committee. She will discuss the issue of evolution in California education. The public is invited.

Presbyterian

"Civil Rights Begin at Home" will be the sermon topic to be given by The Rev. Deane Hendricks of the Carmel Presbyterian Church at the 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. services Sunday.

Community

The Community Church of the Monterey Peninsula will welcome new members into its fellowship at the 10:30 a.m. Worship Service.

The Rev. Howard E. Bull, Minister, will speak on "Sparrows and People," noting God's concern and care for not only the wild creatures, but for man especially. The Youth Sermonette will be entitled, "Painting."

Christian Scientist

"Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man." This verse from James is included in this Sunday's Christian Science Lesson-Sermon, entitled "Everlasting Punishment."

Services at First Church of Christ, Scientist, Carmel, Monte Verde at Sixth, begin at 11 a.m. and at 5 p.m., and are open to all.

Another passage in the lesson, from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, reads: "Evil thoughts and aims reach no farther and do no more harm than one's belief permits. Evil thoughts, lusts, and malicious purposes cannot go forth, like wandering pollen, from one human mind to another, finding unsuspected lodgment, if virtue and truth build a strong defense."

"What are Tests for?" is the subject of the program from the Christian Science radio series, "The Truth That Heals," that will be broadcast by station KRML at 6:30 a.m. on Sunday.

Wayfarer

Dr. Herbert W. Neale will preach at the 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m. Sunday services at the Carmel United Methodist Church of the Wayfarer.

First Baptist

Congregational life in the First Baptist Church, Carmel is concerned about genuineness in Christian experience, and reaching beyond familiar forms and rituals to the levels where the life struggle exists.

The congregation welcomes participants in worship and fellowship Sunday mornings and evenings at eleven a.m. and six p.m.

Sunday morning's sermon theme by The Rev. Roy McBeth is "Experiencing a Committed Fellowship" in which this idea of a vital and meaningful relationship will be explored. Sunday evening service is one of communion and meditation at which the table is set in the center of the sanctuary and communicants are seated around it, engaging in singing and in sharing of their life experiences in Christ. First Baptist is on the Carmel Valley Road at Schulte Road.

CARL P. VETTER

Obituaries

Carl P. Vetter services

Memorial services were held yesterday at the Little Chapel-by-the-Sea in Pacific Grove for Carl P. Vetter who died Sunday at Community Hospital of complications resulting from a recent heart attack.

Chairman of the board of the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross, Vetter was born Dec. 15, 1892 in Copenhagen, Denmark.

A civil engineer specializing in techniques of hydraulics, Vetter received his bachelor's degrees from the University of Copenhagen in 1912 and his master's in civil engineering from the Copenhagen Royal College of Engineering in 1916.

After two years of military service (1916 to 1918) with the Royal Danish Artillery, he married Else R. Kalom of Denmark and honeymooned on the way to his first foreign assignment in Tientsin-Peking. He also worked in Canton from 1919 to 1924 and in Hong Kong from 1924 to 1925.

In 1925, Vetter arrived in the United States to work in San Francisco designing and building dams, power plants and transmission lines. He left San Francisco in 1933 to spend a year studying in Europe and returned in 1934 to work in Denver, Colo., for the Bureau of Reclamation designing dams and irrigation systems.

In 1942 he accepted a position in Washington D.C., as a consultant to the War Production Board, Petroleum Administration for War and held that position for a year. From 1943 to 1944 he was a consultant to the Cuban government.

From 1944 to 1953, Vetter worked in Boulder City, Nev., in administrative and engineering control of all power and irrigation operations on the Colorado River. From 1953 to 1956 he was the consulting design engineer for dams, irrigation systems and flood control works in Baghdad, Iraq and a member and chairman of the Fulbright Board for Iraq.

Since 1956, Vetter resided in Carmel and worked as a consulting hydraulic engineer.

A former professor at the University of Colorado postgraduate school, Mr. Vetter was the author of many books and articles on engineering. He was also a member of Sigma Xi, the Rotary, the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco and a fellow of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

In 1961, Vetter developed an interest in the American Red Cross ambulance service in Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur and was appointed to the board that same year. For the next 12 years he served on the board or as consultant to those working on the ambulance committee and in June, 1972, he was elected chairman of the Carmel Chapter.

He is survived by his two daughters, Mrs. Hamilton Brown of Carmel and Mrs. William Shinner of Vista and Hawaii; six grandchildren and four great grandchildren. Mrs. Vetter died in 1965.

KRAUL

Funeral services were held Saturday at Little Chapel-by-the-Sea for Mrs. Alice Johannes Kraul, 81, who died last Tuesday at her home in Carmel after a long illness. The Rev. David Hill of All Saints Episcopal Church officiated at the services. Inurnment was at El Carmelo Cemetery.

A native of Waimea, Kauai, Hawaii, she was born May 8, 1891. After living for many years in Europe, she came to the United States in 1921, and to Carmel in 1945.

Mrs. Kraul was the widow of Christian Kraul, who died in 1971. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Etherl McNeill of Carmel; two sons, Sydney of Honolulu and John of Tampa, Fla.; 10 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Paul Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

SCHUMACHER

Private funeral services have been held at Mission Mortuary for Mrs. Alice C. Schumacher, 84, who died last Wednesday at Monterey Convalescent Hospital after a long illness. Inurnment followed at Little Chapel by-the-Sea.

A native of Norway, she had been a Peninsula resident for 16 years, living in both Seaside and Carmel.

Mrs. Schumacher was the widow of Herbert Schumacher, who died many years ago. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. Edna Sather of Seattle, Wash., Mrs. Lillian Collier of Harve, Mont., and Mrs. Doris Long of San Anselmo; two sons, Harlan of Sun City, Ariz., and Donald of Seattle, Wash.; a sister, Mrs. Marie Giles of Seattle, Wash.; and a number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.

SCOTT

Private services have been held at Mission Mortuary for Isabelle Armstrong Scott, 84, of Carmel who died Friday at Community Hospital after an extended illness. Inurnment at Little Chapel-by-the-Sea followed.

A native of Scotland, she was born July 4, 1888. Miss Scott was a long time resident of the Peninsula and before her retirement had been employed as a housekeeper at Fish Ranch.

She leaves two brothers, Harry and James Scott, both of Calgary, Canada; and two sisters, Mrs. Catherine Hester of Calgary and Mrs. Peggy Williams of St. Petersburg, Florida.

McINTYRE

Memorial services were held Sunday in Palm Springs for Dr. Charles H. McIntyre, 65, formerly of Carmel, who died last Wednesday at his home in Palm Springs after a long illness. Inurnment followed.

Dr. McIntyre had been in private medical practice in Monterey from 1963 to 1965 and on the staff of Fort Ord Hospital from 1965 to 1972 before retiring and moving to Palm Springs.

A native of Woodland, Mich., he made his home in California for 26 years.

He leaves his widow, Dorothy of Palm Springs; two daughters, Molly Nickell of Irvin and Bonnie Carter of Arlington, Va.; a niece, Janet Langerveldt of Havasu City, Ariz., and five grandchildren.

SURPLUS ANIMALS

Are your pets spayed or altered? If not, are they under your control so that they do not breed unwanted litters?

Sunday evening on television, on a show called "60 Minutes," Mike Wallace visited some of New York City's animal shelters and pounds. In the "Euthanasia Room" we watched as a cage containing four dogs was wheeled into one of the decompression chambers. The door was slammed shut, and the valves were turned on which started the process of removing the oxygen from the chamber. Mike Wallace compared it to being in an unpressurized airplane at an altitude of 50,000 feet. The camera went in close for a view through the small, round window of the chamber. We could see one dog, his head raised, fighting for air and then, mercifully, he disappeared from view. There is a difference of opinion among veterinarians and various people concerned with the mass killing of dogs and cats, as to whether the decompression chamber is, indeed, humane.

We then saw another shelter where an SPCA worker was administering an injection into the heart of a small black and white terrier. The lady explained that this method is considered much more humane in that the animal feels only the slight prick of the needle. She held the little dog tenderly as he tried to lay down on the table, but he was dead almost immediately. An attendant took his lifeless form and added it to the growing pile of bodies on the foor. We were then shown the room where these animals are cremated. We were told that 10,000 dogs and cats are born every hour in this country, and that 15 million dogs and cats were destroyed by animal shelters and pounds in 1972.

Some of the reasons for not having pets spayed or altered are "I don't want her to be deprived of being a mother;" "We always find good homes for them;" "Children should have a chance to see puppies and kittens being born;" "We can't afford to have her spayed (or him altered)." In the face of the above facts, do any of these reasons make any real sense? As to the cost of spaying and altering, it's expensive, to be sure, but let's say you spend $65 for a hysterectomy for your female dog. If you have her for 12 years, you've spent $3.75 per year to keep literally thousands of surplus animals from being born to be killed.

The A.S.P.C.A. says that one female dog is capable of producing around 4,500 offspring in seven yers. Most of these unwanted puppies and kittens, shunted off on unwilling friends and relatives, are turned into shelters or abandoned somewhere - in fact, the A.S.P.C.A. said that 80 percent is an accurate figure.

After Sunday's program, I heard one casual viewer say "... and we always thought we were doing them a favor by taking them to the SPCA!" Of course, he was referring to the staggering death figures, but his tone also said "there must be a better way." There is. Spay and neuter clinics are being established all over the country and, if the hard work by many, many people pays off, we will have one soon in Monterey County. But we can't sit back complacently, confident that "someone" is taking care of it.

We must realize that owning a pet is a moral responsibility. If you are not prepared to give them the care and concern you would give your children, you should not own a pet. This responsibility includes providing adequate shelter, food, veterinary care when necessary, and the knowledge that animals do not have reasoning powers. We cannot tell them that if they do not stay out of the traffic, they will be run over and killed, or that they must not breed because there are not enough homes for their offspring. They simply do not understand -- they are helpless creatures, dependent upon people for their very lives. We cannot let them down.

Never mind the saucer – did you see the guys driving?

By JORUNE JONIKAS

"I'M CONVINCED that the earth is being visited by intelligent beings from off the earth," nuclear physicist Stanton T. Friedman told an audience of more than 500 Friday night at the Monterey Peninsula College Armory.

Early in his discussion of "Flying Saucers ARE Real," Friedman said that 13 years of study and investigation have convinced him of extra-terrestrial visitations. The evidence is overwhelming, but not really tangible, he said. Although there "is no flying saucer hovering outside" nor a "little green guy" walking in front of his podium, he pointed out that sighting reports, radar cases, photographs and "the heart of the matter, eyewitness reports" do exist.

There are three kinds of UFO reports, Friedman explained. The first kind really involves IFO's – Identifiable Flying Objects – in which sightings cannot be identified by the observer, but can be identified after study by qualified people.

The second group includes those reports for which not enough information is available even for evaluation by competent people.

The third group, the one on which Friedman bases his conclusion, is the one which includes sightings that the observer cannot identify and which cannot be identified even after competent investigation. The objects remain unidentified in spite of the fact that there was a good observer, a good investigator and "plenty of data."

The objects involved in this third group, Friedman said, definitely appear to be manufactured "judging by the way they look, but not manufactured on earth judging by the way they act."

The biggest official scientific study, Friedman continued, was the 1955 study undertaken by the Battelle Memorial Institute in Columbus, Ohio for the Air Force's Project Blue Book and published in Project Blue Book Special Report 14. The institute looked at all the sightings in the Air Force files, categorized them and evaluated them as to quality then compiled all the data into the report.

Of the 2199 sightings examined by the study, 434 were classified as unknowns – 19.7 percent of the total. In the quality distribution of unknowns chart of the report, 213 sightings were labeled excellent and of those 213, a total of 71 were of the unknown classification – 33.3 percent of the excellent rating. "The better the quality of the cases, the more likely they would be to be labeled unknown – exactly the opposite of what the skeptics would say," Friedman pointed out.

Although the tables were not made public, a press release on the study was distributed, Friedman said, which included a statement by the then Secretary of the Air Force, Donald Quarles. Quarles said that "on the basis of this study we believe that no objects such as those popularly described as flying saucers have overflown the United States. I feel certain that even the unknown 3 percent could have been explained as conventional phenomena or illusions if more complete observational data had been available."

As Friedman explained in his paper to the 1971 Midwest UFO Conference in St. Louis, Mo., "It was carefully not pointed out that the '3 percent' had nothing to do with the 2,199 sightings (of which 19.7 percent were unknowns) but only referred to a small group of 131 sightings looked at under pressure to reduce (by one means or another) the percentage of unknowns in the six months preceding the issuance of the press release. The notion that even the unknowns could have been identified if more data had been available was completely false."

IN DISCUSSING UFO's, Friedman said, physical appearance and behavior of the crafts must be taken into consideration. He described the objects as either metallic, disc-shaped objects (from 50 to 100 feet in

Arica Institute holds open house

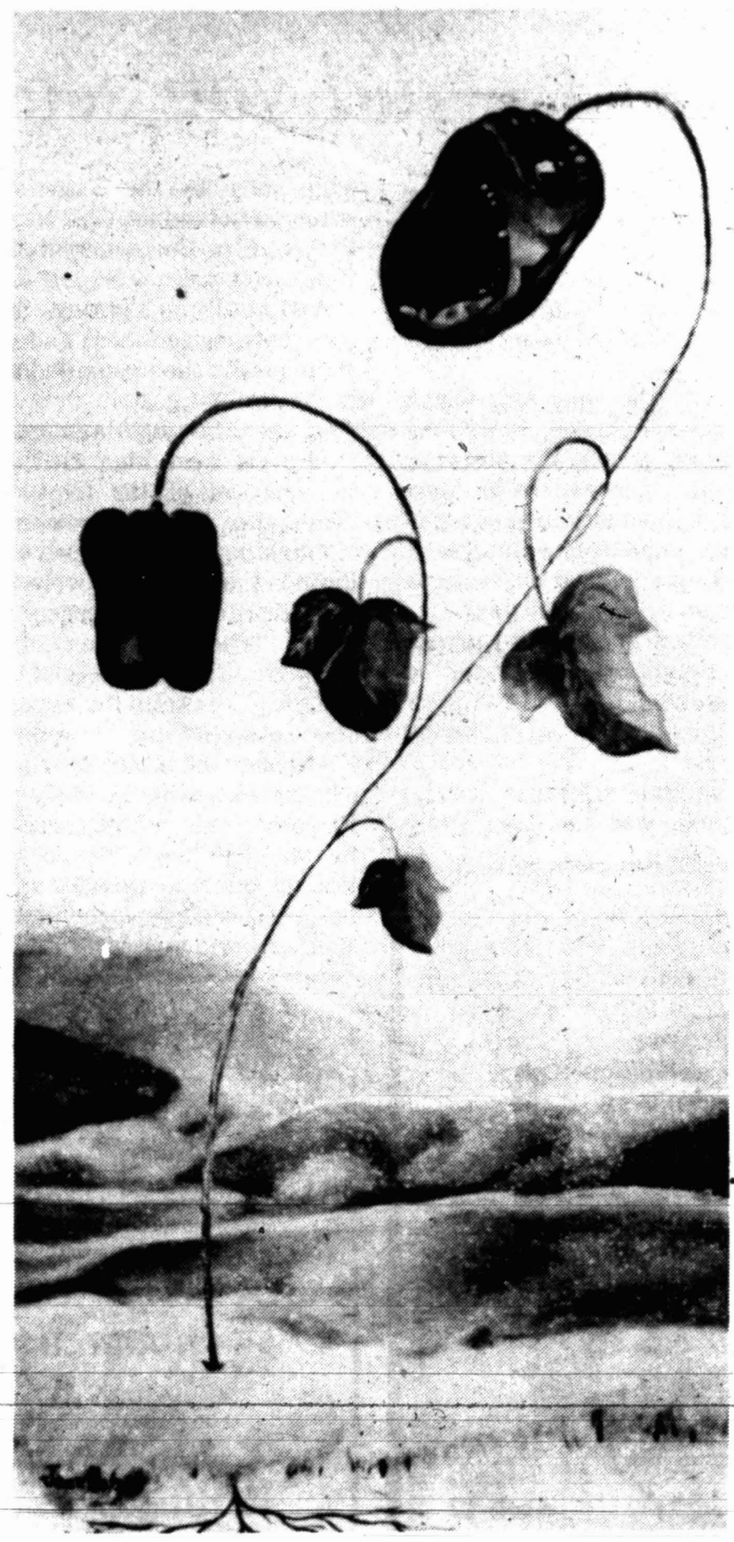
Arica Institute in America, a non-profit educational organization working as a vehicle for higher levels of consciousness, will hold an open house at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, May 3 in the Oak Room of Del Monte Lodge, Pebble Beach.

The format will consist of a brief talk on Arica Institute with a question and answer period. The audience will participate in some Arica exercises.

Arica Institute tries to help the individual deal with problems such as over-population, pollution, and mismanagement of natural resources, by man's conscious evolution.

Arica will be offering two 16 hour open path workshops to teach the initial exercises. These weekend workshops will be offered on May 5, 6, 12, and 13.

For reservations and further information, call 624-4882.



"THE LAUGHING GREEN PEPPER" is among the paintings which Jean Hofsas will exhibit this month in a show of her latest oils and graphics at the Valley Hills Gallery in the Valley Hills Shopping Center. The exhibit will open Saturday and Sunday, with viewing hours between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. Miss Hofsas is a well-known Peninsula artist. She teaches art at Fort Ord and the Monterey Presidio, and has been a member of the Valley Hills Gallery for five years. Her work is included in many private collections in the United States and Canada.

How laws affect women

Mrs. Joyce Ferris Nedde, Dep. Dist. Atty. of Monterey County, will talk on "Laws Affecting Women" in the second program of the lecture-discussion series, "What Every Woman Needs To Know," at 8 p.m. Thursday, May 3 in the Monterey Peninsula College Lecture Forum-103.

Mrs. Nedde serves as prosecutor in criminal cases in the Municipal and Superior Courts. She previously practiced criminal law for six years in the San Francisco office of the California Attorney General. Her lecture will be an interpretation of present laws which directly and indirectly affect women.

On May 10, a panel will discuss "Finances Affecting Women" and May 17 the seminar topic is "Program Development for Women-Female Role Today."

diameter) or large cigar-shaped objects which hover, move straight up or down, forward and back at fantastic speeds and all without noise, exhaust or wings.

"No company in 1955 could make such objects," Friedman emphasized.

As far as duration of observation goes, Friedman said 45 percent of the observations were for more than five minutes and a "substantial number were for over one-half hour."

A lot of people ask, Friedman continued, why UFO are never observed on radar screens. "Air Force files," he countered, "are loaded with radar unknowns," adding that at least one cause involved an Air Force RB 47 loaded with electronic gear which was flying north over the Gulf of Mexico when it was "joined by a UFO" which stayed with the plane for 700 miles and one and one-half hours and was observed visually by the airplane crew, on ground base radar and on the aircraft's radar. At one point in the flight, Friedman related, "the UFO stopped dead, which is quite a trick at 500 miles per hour."

During Friedman's discussion of the various "scientific" reports available he mentioned that the Condon Report – A Scientific Study of Unidentified Flying Objects was written by Dr. Edward U. Condon of the University of Colorado who did no actual investigating himself. Friedman commented that Dr. Condon was "about 65 when he started the study, but we all would have been better off if he'd retired then."

When the Condon report came out, Friedman said that the tone across the country was "now the UFO nuts can join the flat earth society."

In countering the argument that "only kooks, quacks and little old ladies in tennis shoes believe or are interested in UFOs," Friedman pointed out that "the Industrial Research Poll showed that 54 percent of the research and development community believe UFOs exist in contrast to only 31 percent who think they don't. Every large scale poll including the Gallup and the ones taken for Condon indicated that more education means greater likelihood for belief in life in outer space and UFO reality."

Friedman said that ignorance, fear of ridicule ("the laughter curtain"), a failure to use knowledge to understand UFOs and ego prevent many intelligent, important and influental people from "jumping on the pro-UFO bandwagon."

Friedman discussed the possibility of interstellar travel without the involvement of thousands of years. He explained in his conference paper that "everybody seems to have gotten the idea that Einstein's findings restrict our travel because as they solemnly proclaim, nothing can go faster than the speed of light. Thus, the shortest time for a round trip to a star 10 light years away, even neglecting the time to accelerate and decelerate is 20 years. Right? No - wrong, at least for space ships if not for light photons which unlike men and machines have no mass. The Einsteinian laws of relativity, as a matter of fact, are what make it possible to explore the universe in times compatible with human life spans -- for the voyagers, if not for their friends back home. Relativity says that as the velocity of a mass approaches very close to the velocity of light, time in effect, slows down for the mass though not for the observer."

Friedman said he wasn't talking about reaching the end of the galaxy or traveling to other universes, but "about our little neighborhood -- just down the block -- the near-by stars of five to 40 light years away."

"OUR KNOWLEDGE or lack of it has nothing to do with reality," Friedman said.

In cosmic time, he continued, the solar system has been sitting around for 5,000,000,000 years or so, while the earth has had advanced technology for only the past 100 years.

Technology is built on technology which is in turn built on technology, Friedman said, adding, "let's assume somebody somewhere else got started on his technology kick a little bit before we did.

"Some creature may have been traipsing about the stars" for the last 1,000 or 1,000,000 years, Friedman brought out.

The scientist who worked for 14 years in industry on nuclear rockets and nuclear power plants said, "you have to expect to find new laws in physics. There are now laws in physics now that interfere with UFO reality."

Friedman said he preferred to call UFOs earth excursion modules (EEMs) after the lunar excursion modules and added the idea of EEMs would not be that "far fetched."

He believes that the analogy between the actions and behavior of the LEM and the UFOs is a real one.

"In both cases we have strange shaped (compared to airplanes, balloons or helicopters) craft able to land in unprepared out-of-the-way places with no assistance from people at the landing sites. In both cases the pilots look weird by normal standards though they all appear to be 'humanoid." In each case, the pilots have been observed by reliable witnesses to seek out and gather specimens, to pick up artifacts, and to apparently gambol aimlessly in what appears to be a childish fashion. The duration of the stay is limited and in each case the humanoids finally re-enter their excursion modules and take off again without local assistance and without leaving someone behind."

There is a great deal of evidence that people have seen EEMs "on or near the ground" controlled by humanoids, Friedman said.

During his entire lecture, Friedman illustrated his points with slides of charts, drawings of the humanoids and pictures of the EEMs.

At one point he emphasized that there "is no reason to assume that life here developed independently of all other life." With the existence of inter-stellar travel, "we could have had a common ancestor."

During the question-answer session after the lecture, a member of the audience asked why haven't the supposedly super-intelligent beings communicated with "us" in an intelligent manner? Friedman answered, "How many scuba divers talk to the fish?"

For inter-stellar travelers to land in the middle of a city and offer to conduct tours through their craft is about as silly as bringing aborigines in "to play with the buttons at the Minuteman missile sites," Friedman pointed out.

He ventured to say the inter-stellar travelers could be "graduate students doing research for a thesis" or the earth could be an "R and R place or a honeymoon capitol" or, he added, "we could be somebody's crop, which is even more distressing."

At the end of the lecture, Friedman asked the audience if any believed they had seen a UFO and 48 admitted that they had.

TAKE THE PLUNGE

IN THE SUN BELT

Let's admit there ARE mornings when Monterey gets just a little fog.

Not so here! It's nearly always sunny and warm — hence the pool, heated for extra comfort, and the spectacular landscaping and the fenced area for children and pets.

This spacious, convenient ranch style home has three bedrooms, two baths, a large combined living and dining room, convenient kitchen with a pleasant breakfast nook. It's well-built and beautifully maintained.

There's more! A spectacular view of Monterey Bay! An extra large double garage! It's convenient to public transportation and just a healthy walk to Del Monte Center.

A gem of a house in a park-like setting for $65,000. Phone 373-1361 for details.

IN SUNNY ALTA MESA

The house offers 3,417 square feet of living space, including living room, separate dining, paneled den, family room off kitchen, four bedrooms with four and a half baths, plus a downstairs recreation room off the patio area with a 20 x 40 fully-automatic swimming pool. Space galore!

The downstairs bedroom is double size with its own bath. There are three fireplaces, lots of storage, and two double garages.

A beautiful home for family living and easy entertaining priced at $159,500. To view, phone 373-1361.

IN A PARTY PALACE

Completely secluded, there are breath-taking hilltop vistas — the splendor of Carmel Valley at your feet.

Fully landscaped and fenced with ample parking, this is an intriguing value at $125,000. Call 659-2251, and let us show you this fantastic home.

IN THE BLUE PACIFIC

A sunny Mediterranean Villa in Carmel-by-the-Sea with Old World charm and modern convenience.

- A short step to shining white beaches with ocean views from all three levels, an authentic villa in a garden setting.
- A delicately-carved gate opens to a world of flower-bordered, stone-paved terraces.
- The entry lanai is beautifully landscaped, and there is an electrically-controlled conservatory ideal for the orchid fancier.
- Elegant French doors open the formal living room to a sunny ocean-view terrace.
- The Normandy kitchen was designed by artisans for gourmet entertaining.
- The penthouse suite affords a rooftop sundeck and a panoramic Carmel Bay view.
- On 1/3 acre, ample for a guest house, cabana and pool.

Monterey Peninsula Landmark

Much written about in architectural magazines and always a favorite on the house and garden tours, we invite you to have your own private tour of one of the most interesting and unusual homes you will ever see. Literally handmade by Mexican craftsmen, about fifty years ago, it is rustic, earthy, handhewn and majestically beautiful. The 59 foot long living room has high cathedral ceiling with peeled pine supports and rafters laced with rawhide; a walk-in fireplace made of granite boulders, and looking down into this lovely room is a loft study. The 40 foot long dining room has the same cathedral ceiling with peeled rafters and a charming Mexican style fireplace. There are four bedrooms each with bath, and a little extra room and bath beside the kitchen. It is conveniently located in the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, and sits on 1½ acres of ancient trees and native growth, all encompassed within a handmade adobe wall. A building site of ½ acre, could be sold off. It's a collector's item to be sure. $117,500.

CARMEL - SOUTH SAN ANTONIO

Immaculate shake roofed 3 bedroom 2½ bath house on a beautifully landscaped lot. The house has hardwood floors with wall to wall carpeting on stairway and in the living room. Forced air heat, abundant storage closets and efficient kitchen and laundry room. This property has been well maintained - would make excellent vacation rental or full time residence and is well worth the asking price of $79,500.

A RARE OPPORTUNITY NEAR THE BEACH

This is REALLY a charmer on a 68' x 100' corner lot on Carmelo, just one block South of Ocean. It has to have one of the most attractive living rooms and dining rooms in all of Carmel. The house has 3 bedrooms, 4 baths and a den. (One bedroom and bath are quite separate). The 20' master bedroom, which has a fireplace, would also make an excellent studio for a well-heeled artist. We say well-heeled because the property is listed at the realistic price of $97,500. If your taste is for strictly new houses, you won't like this one, but if you like the charm that comes ONLY in an older home, call us for an appointment to see this great Carmel house.

CARMEL CITY LEVEL LOT, $22,000

We know of very few lots, available at any price that are situated within the Carmel City Limits. THIS site is fairly level and rather near town, making it desirable and in what appears to be an ever-upward market, reasonable.

LOOKING FOR A VIEW LOT

If you are, you should at least SEE what is still available in High Meadow. You're sure to like it. HIGH MEADOW is in the Carmel School District. To get there, go East (away from the ocean) on Carpenter at the Carpenter Street - Highway 1 traffic signal. M.F. "Jinx" Connelly is in our tract office Saturday and Sunday afternoons; information and price lists are available at our main Carmel office Monday through Saturday, or by telephone at any time. There are a few Valley View lots left in the $17,500 to $18,500 range and a few OCEAN VIEW lots at under $20,000.

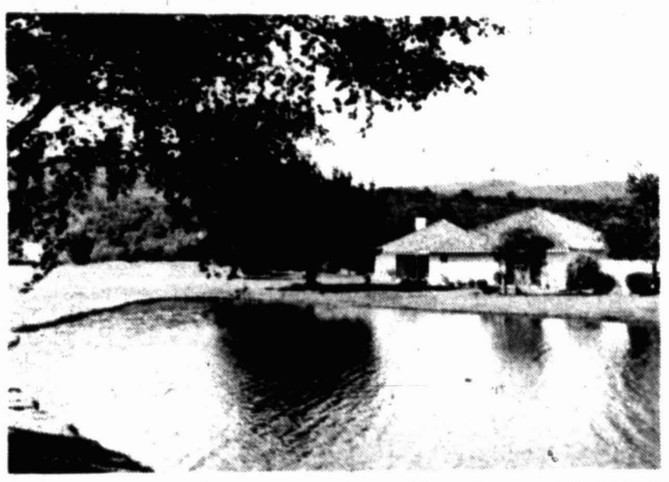
The Good Life — C.V. Country Club Style



OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

Sophisticated living in the sun! Have your breakfast on a sunny, wind-protected patio overlooking not only the 14th Fairway of the Carmel Valley Country Club, but with the view jeweled by the little lake frequented by the delightful waterfowl of this much praised and frequently "prized" golfer's paradise.

An almost new home which can only be described as "top-of-the-line", the trade expression for all of the fixtures, appliances and hardware, but which applies equally to every feature of design and construction. All rooms, including the baths, are spacious, light and airy. Two bedrooms and a lovely library, just under 3,000 sq. ft.

Teachers ask salary raise

Carmel teachers opened their annual salary negotiations with the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees Tuesday night with a bid for an 11 percent pay raise for next year.

The proposal presented by the Certificated Employees Council seeks a 6 percent cost of living increase, plus an additional 5 percent to make teachers' salaries more competitive with wages in other fields.

The board's initial reaction was non-commital on the cost-of-living boost, but decidedly cool to any across-the-boards raise in the salary schedule.

The proposal was explained by Lewis DiStefano, chairman of the CEC finance committee, who said the Carmel district has been loosing ground in comparing its salary scale to other unified districts.

Di Stefano said the district had done well in keeping up with the cost of living, but had fallen behind the percentage increases given teachers in other unified districts in the past four years.

In response, board members said the impact of SB 90, the school finance-tax reform bill, limits the amount the Carmel district can spend per-pupil.

"Since we run close to 80 percent of our budget in salaries, we have to do some leveling off there" trustee Richard Wilsdon said. "The intent of the law is the district will not be able to increase its expenditures beyond the cost of living factor."

James Miller, president of the board, agreed.

"I think we do have a very good salary schedule here, no matter how you want to compare it," he said. There comes a time when we have to hold the line on the basic schedule. But the cost of living part will have to be considered."

DiStefano argued that in the past 14 years the district has always had sufficient income to meet every salary request of the CEC if it wished, and that the basic question should be whether or not the district has money to grant the pay raise.

"Next year, yes" Wilsdon said.

"Then we'll take it," DiStefano replied.

"But we have to be able to finance it the next year and the year after and the year after that," Wilsdon said. "This isn't a one-shot deal."

Added Miller: "We have to look at a lot wider spectrum than just teachers' salaries."

According to the CEC report, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has reported that the cost of living rose 3.9 percent in the San Francisco Bay Area during 1972.

The CEC said this represents a loss of $506 in buying power for the average teacher earning $12,927.

Because the 3.9 percent pay increase, if granted, would not appear on paychecks until October, the CEC asked for a total of 6 percent cost of living increase to make up for the nine-month time lag from the end of 1972.

The CEC report also compared the salaries of Carmel teachers with those earned by employees of General Motors, who average $12,466 a year.

According to information published by the State Department of Education, the CUSD ranked at the 95th percentile for unified school districts in '70-71, the most recent year for which statewide statistics are available, with a median teacher's salary of $12,375. That meant that five percent of the state's unified districts had a higher median salary.

The salary proposal was not an action item, and will be brought back for further discussion and negotiation in the weeks ahead.

On action items, the board:

-- Approved the high school course of study for next year. New courses include electives in critical reading and advanced creative writing, honors math, civics of community life and sculpture. It is also planned to add a course on personal psychology if a qualified teacher is available.

-- Approved a request from the Monterey Municipal Court to allow selected misdemeanor offenders to work off a court sentence by performing menial tasks for the school district.

-- Adopted the school calendar for the next two years, with a total of 177 teaching days each year. Students will start the 1973 school year on Sept. 4, the day after Labor Day. School will end June 7. Christmas vacation will start on Monday, Dec. 24, and run through Friday, Jan. 4.
